Four Killed as Wave of Violence Sweeps Over City

WHITE MAN SLAIN IN MYSTERY FIGHT AS WOMEN WATCH

All Victims Are Stabbed; Police Probe Death on West Peachtree Place; Companion Questioned, Unable To Give Cause.

"SCARFACE" ROW ENDS IN DEATH

Insurance Angle Investigated in Negro's Death; Grady Kept Busy Caring for Wounded Scrappers.

An almost unprecedented wave of violence, murder and assault swept Atlanta over the week-end, with mad-dened killers taking a toll of four lives. A number of other victims of stab and gunshot wounds were admitted for treatment at Grady hospital.

Officers were kept busy during the early morning hours yesterday as call after call was sent out over the police radio system telling of additional assaults.

Johnnie Jenkins, 37-year-old white man, was found with his head and body literally covered with stab wounds shortly before 2 o'clock yesterday morning on West Peachtree place near Lovejoy street. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Grady hospital. Investigation showed he had received a wound of the scalp, three stab wounds in his left chest, eight in the chest and abdomen, a bad gash in his right arm and a battering blow in the mouth. He lived at 345 Fowler street, N. E.

Patrolmen W. E. Whitten and R. E. Finley reported they found Jenkins lying in the street in front of 185 West Peachtree place. Two eyewitnesses to the assault, Mrs. Ruby Shell and Mrs. Lessie Teeling, both of 186 West Peachtree place, told officers they saw a "tall, slender negro" scuffling with Jenkins. They said the negro knocked Jenkins down and then appeared to be beating him. The assailant escaped.

Greek Navy Ordered To Quell Strikers

SALONIKA, Greece, May 10.—(AP)—The city was quiet but there was no traffic in army-patrolled streets today following fighting between tobacco strikers and troops yesterday in which 22 were killed and 250 wounded.

Four destroyers were ordered here to assist soldiers in maintaining order. Victims of the disorders were buried this morning. Thousands followed the funeral processions, but there were no incidents.

Railroad workers went back to their jobs after a 24-hour strike in sympathy with the tobacco workers.

ATHENS, May 10.—(AP)—Workers' leaders were reported tonight to be trying to stage a general strike tomorrow throughout Greece in protest against the killing of strikers at Salonika yesterday.

President Under Protest

MANUEL AZANA.

AZANA IS ELECTED SPAIN'S PRESIDENT

Premier's Elevation Removes Him From Leadership of Strong Party.

MADRID, May 10.—(AP)—Premier Manuel Azana, a candidate "under protest," became president of the world's youngest republic by an overwhelming majority from 874 electors gathered in a perfunctory session today in the Crystal Palace.

The electoral convention was a mere formality. The 56-year-old lawyer, orator and playwright, regarded as Spain's ablest politician, was the sole candidate. He was elected by a vote of 754 to 120.

The stocky little premier received the official announcement of his election with a characteristic lack of emotion. The commission brought the tidings to his modest apartment, where he sat chatting with his family and a few close friends.

"Thank you gentlemen," said Azana. "I accept the honor conferred upon me and will discharge the new obligations under the very best of my ability. Spain may rest assured that I will be loyal to the principles of democracy and that the welfare of the nation will be my constant concern."

The only incident to enliven the convention was an exchange of blows between two leftist members as an outgrowth of an alleged reflection upon the character of one of them.

The convention bore all the earmarks of a picnic with delegates swilling under the glass roof of the large building, erected in 1886 for the Philippine Exposition. Members of the cortes and an equal number of electors chosen by a special election were privileged to elect the new president.

The inauguration tomorrow will be a relatively simple ceremony. Barring

Closed Florida Bank Will Pay Off Today

MIAMI, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—Payment of a third 5 per cent dividend to depositors holding common claims in the Bank of Biscayne, in liquidation, will begin here tomorrow. The dividend, amounting to $350,000, will make a total of $1,050,000 paid out to depositors since liquidation began.

LEAGUE DELEGATES HOPE TO CONTINUE ITALIAN SANCTIONS

Worried Small Powers Believe Geneva Measures Will Be Retained Despite End of Conflict.

GENEVA, May 10.—(AP)—A belief sanctions would be continued despite Italy's annexation of Ethiopia was general tonight on the eve of a crucial session of the League of Nations council.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and his British colleagues remained coldly non-committal. There seemed to be no crusading spirit manifested, in contrast to last fall when the "war of aggression" began.

Smaller states of Europe, however, were plainly alarmed over the possible repercussions of Premier Mussolini's seizure of a League state. They expressed loyalty to the League but were waiting for France and Britain to take the leadership in the present crisis and to save the League, to which they cling because they themselves have no mighty fleets or armies.

Protestants Reported.

Geneva was stirred by a report—denied by the Italian spokesman—that Italy would seek a way out by giving Ethiopia a status similar to that of India and that Ethiopia would continue her League membership under the protection of the king of Italy.

A feature of this report was Italy would put forward a substitute Ethiopian delegate to Geneva, handpicked by Rome.

"I don't think," an Italian spokesman declared.

A move took form among some smaller powers to have a resolution

MUSSOLINI'S GUNS BOOM IN EMPIRE

England's and France's Attitude Toward New Nation Worries Italians

ROME, May 10.—(AP)—A 101-gun salute roared in every garison and city in Italy today, booming in a new empire.

Literally millions of Italians gathered in their public squares to continue last night's demonstration and cheer a revival of the empire of the Caesars.

The Rome crowd cheered before the royal palace but Emperor Victor Emmanuel did not appear. Morning revenue had having simplified it down to a mere 60-odd thousand words—about the length of a fair-sized summer novel, but the plot is different—and having made its provisions so clear and lucid that it may be read backwards or forwards, and either way you seem to get practically the same result. So could anything be fairer than that?

It may yet be necessary to call in Professor Einstein to elucidate it. If he can explain his theory of relativity—and the professor still asserts he can—he might be willing to tackle the job.

Anyhow, the ultimate outcome—and in this connection I certainly like that word "outcome"—must be that congress will find a method further to lighten the pocketbooks of one and all. In other words, "we've got what it takes."

And then, after cleaning up a few odds and ends, such as Senator Black and Representative Zioncheck, congress will adjourn and the members will go home. Or maybe they'll be afraid to go home. Wouldn't it be funny if they had to take refuge in a conservation camp?

Byrd Charges 11 Big Corporations Will Pay No Taxes Under New Bill

Senator Lists 29 Other Large Companies Which May Pay Less and Declares They May Be Given 'Stranglehold' on Small Competitors.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Openly questioning the administration's proposal to tax undistributed corporate profits, Senator Byrd, democrat, Virginia, in a letter made public today, listed 11 giant corporations which he said would escape paying any taxes.

Writing to Secretary Morgenthau, the Virginian also listed 29 other big companies which he said might pay less taxes under the administration revenue bill and asked the treasury chief to give him the names of all corporations with incomes of $1,000,000 or more that would pay less than under their present dividend policies.

He expressed concern over possibility of "giving these large corporations a greater advantage and perhaps a stranglehold over their present smaller competitors."

Byrd, in his letter to Morgenthau, said he was "concerned about the application of the proposed tax policies to those corporations which now have large surpluses and a strong cash or credit position."

"We must guard small man," he said, "that legislation does not prevent the healthy growth and expansion of our smaller businesses by imposing a penalty upon them if their financial position and their business opportunities do not permit the payment in dividends of substantially all their profits. I want your assistance in appraising the situation."

The 11 "financially strong companies that can completely avoid taxation" by distributing their income on the same basis they did in 1934 were listed as follows:

List of Companies.
American Telephone and Telegraph Co., American Tobacco Co., American Smelting and Refining Co., General Electric Co., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., International Harvester Co., National Biscuit Co., National Dairy Products Co., Ohio Oil Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., and Texas Co.

On the same basis, Byrd said the following 13 companies would pay less than 5 per cent instead of 15 per cent under the present law: Air Reduction, Allied Chemical and Dye, Corn Products Refining, Curtis Publishing, E. I. du Pont, Firestone Tire and Rubber, General Foods, Great Western Sugar, Imperial Oil, Liggett and Myers Tobacco, Parke, Davis, Pennsylvania Railroad and U. S. Smelting and Refining.

He said the following 16 would pay

BORAH AND TAFT SEEK OHIO BALLOT

Democratic, Republican Primaries Are Set in 8 States for This Week.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Political interest tonight centered on primaries and party conventions to be held in eight states this week, with major attention focused on Ohio, where Senator Borah, of Idaho, contests with Robert A. Taft, a "favorite son," who has the backing of the state party machine for the republican presidential nomination.

With only four weeks remaining before the republican party's 1,001 delegates gather in Cleveland to pick their candidate, leaders of the various camps looked to each new convention or primary for indications of strength.

The democratic high command went ahead gathering suggestions for the party platform, giving scant hope to anyone but President Roosevelt to be nominated at Philadelphia. Democrats will pick 144 delegates this week in eight states. As the week started, they still had to select 544 of 1,001.

The primary and convention schedules:

Monday—Wyoming democratic and republican conventions.
Tuesday—Ohio, presidential primary; West Virginia, primary; Delaware, North Dakota, democratic convention; Vermont, republican convention.

Thursday—Vermont, democratic convention.
Friday—Oregon primary, democratic convention.
Saturday—Nevada republican convention.

Borah campaigned in Ohio all last week. He found up last night in Cleveland with a radio speech in which he asserted that a part of the republican leadership was fostering a monopolistic system which brings "a scanty, meager living for the vast majority and almost incalculable wealth for a few."

Developments in the part labor will play in the campaign also were expected. George L. Berry, the President's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, and president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, planned to set up headquarters for "labor's non-partisan league" in the capital.

The American Federation of Labor's

ICKES FUND FIGHT WILL BE RESUMED IN UPPER CHAMBER

House Will Vote 2 1-2 Billion Relief Bill Today, Shifting Battleground Over PWA to Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Congressmen seeking funds for public works projects turned to the senate tonight as the battleground of a new effort to amend the $2,364,000,000 deficiency bill after having met a crushing defeat in the house.

The house vote finally on the bill tomorrow, but that will be a mere formality. All attempts to earmark any of the $1,425,000,000 carried in it for Secretary Ickes' PWA were beaten down Friday and leaders said the measure would be sent to the senate without change.

Senator Hayden, democrat Arizona, was expected to lead the fight in the senate appropriations committee and on the floor to set aside some money for construction of large public works projects. President Roosevelt requested the new relief fund to continue Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration after next July 1. He has opposed earmarking of any part of it for PWA.

See PWA Fund.

Privately, one leader who helped defeat the house PWA bill said he would "not be surprised if a couple of hundred million dollars" was given PWA before the final congressional action is completed.

The house bill, introduced by Representative Britter, democrat, New York, first asked for $700,000,000, but cut the figure to $350,000,000 after failure to

GAIN IS REPORTED IN HOME BUILDING

Demand for Skilled Labor May Bring About Shortage, Officials Fear

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Government housing officials said today a country-wide surge in home construction this spring had created a strong demand for skilled labor, presenting the possibility of an "acute" shortage if the present upswing continues.

Bulwarking their observations with individual reports from representatives in a dozen states, federal housing administration experts asserted that mounting construction levels "have shown a decidedly beneficial effect on employment" resulting in "a scarcity of skilled labor, particularly bricklayers and carpenters."

Besides the pickup in construction, one official said, the lack of skilled labor may be attributed in part to the fact that few apprentices in these trades were trained during recent years.

"This thing is really of concern to a good many builders who believe that if their operations get back to approximately normal there may be an acute shortage of skilled labor," he said.

Construction Costs.

"Such an eventuality," he added, "might have a very bad effect on building generally by pushing construction costs to higher levels and making it impossible for low-income groups to buy homes."

Reports from housing administration

Florida Has Balance Of $6,336,325.10

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 10.—(AP)—A $6,336,325.10 balance in the Florida treasury at the close of April business was reported today by State Treasurer W. V. Knott.

It was a gain of nearly half a million dollars over the April, 1935, total of $5,865,787.74, although disbursements were $4,897,365.22 against receipts of $5,373,754.44.

Two funds—general revenue and Confederate pensions—again topped the million-dollar mark with their balances. The former, despite an allocation of $457,704 for schools, finished the month with $1,533,998.46, while there was $1,210,262.90 in the pension account.

The state road department fund showed $914,948.46, and the federal aid fund was a fourth position with $291,049.58.

ALDREDGE URGED TO ACCEPT POST

Alderman to Announce Reply Today to Plea of New Police Board Head.

J. C. (Mott) Aldredge, seventh ward alderman, who announced Saturday that he was too busy to serve as a member of the newly created safety committee to control police department affairs, said he would accept the post today.

Alderman Frank H. Reynolds, chairman of the new committee, urged Aldredge to change his mind and was informed that the seventh ward alderman would make a definite reply today.

"We believe that Mr. Aldredge would make an efficient and entirely satisfactory member of the group," Reynolds said yesterday, "and I urged him to reconsider his previous stand. I am hopeful that he will decide to accept the appointment."

"It will be impossible for me to serve," Aldredge had previously said, "because my work requires that I be out of the city considerably and the other assignments which I have on council committees take up the rest of my time."

The meeting of the new safety committee at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night at police headquarters will be the first together of the new group. Reynolds called off a scheduled meeting of the committee originally planned for today to evolve policies, declaring that the four members of the group who have already accepted their appointments are in accord and there was no need for the preliminary meeting.

It is expected that in the event Aldredge declines to serve on the committee, another member will be named by Mayor Key in time for the initial session.

Five Germans Jailed For Listening to Radio

BREMEN, Germany, May 10.—(AP)—Five persons were sentenced to prison today for listening to soviet broadcasts from Moscow radio station.

Two married couples and a friend were given one to two years because they tuned in while news about Germany was being broadcast by communist stations. They were charged with "plotting treason."

ALL SIX JUSTICES WOULD HEAR CASE ON FINAL APPEAL

Opinion Rendered Saturday Not Binding and Does Not Decide Issue of Legal Treasurer, He Says in Announcement.

NEW PROCEEDINGS TO BE FILED SOON

Suit Will Be Heard in Troup County Court By Jury; Ousted Official Cites Dissenting Justice

Asserting that the ruling Saturday of the state supreme court decides nothing, George B. Hamilton yesterday announced that he will immediately file quo warranto proceedings seeking to test the claim of J. B. (Tobe) Daniel to the treasurer's office.

Hamilton's decision to further litigate the issue came after a long conference with his attorney, Marion Smith. It is expected that the quo warranto action, which will result in a trial of the issues of fact before a jury, will be presented to the Troup superior court this week. Under the law they must be filed in the home county of the defendant. In this case Daniel is the defendant. His home is in Lawrence.

Meanwhile nothing came from Governor Talmadge but it is generally expected that he will move today to obtain the $2,500,000 tied up in Atlanta banks because of the controversy over the treasurer. In his statement yesterday Hamilton said that the ruling of the supreme court had the effect of freeing this money but did nothing else.

Opinion Not Binding.

In his statement yesterday Hamilton declared that the ruling of the supreme court was one thing and the opinion another, asserting that inasmuch as the opinion was not unanimous it was not binding on future court cases which develop out of the Talmadge dictatorship.

The statement of the suspended treasurer follows:

"The decision rendered Saturday settles absolutely nothing as to whether Daniel is the legal treasurer of the state of Georgia.

"I am told by lawyers that it is necessary to distinguish between the judgment of the court and the opinion filed when the judgment is rendered. A judgment is binding between the parties. An opinion may or may not be followed in another case. The judgment in this case is simply a judgment refusing the banks the right to bring bills for interpleader. I regret this as it probably means the banks being refused this remedy will be forced, in order to protect their securities, to allow Daniel to receive the money deposited with them. All the state has been put on notice that the Governor expects to spend this money without warrant of law and in defiance of law, and it may be under the decision as rendered that there will be no way to stop him from continuing his lawless expenditure of the state's funds.

"But the judgment is only a judgment; the banks this remedy. As between Daniel and myself, no judgment whatever has been rendered as to who is the treasurer of the state."

MEDAL IS SOUGHT FOR ENVOY'S WIFEBill To Be Offered To Honor Heroine of Addis Ababa.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(P)—The coveted congressional medal of honor would go to Mrs. Cornelius Van H. Engert "for heroism in defense of the American legation at Addis Ababa" under a bill to be introduced tomorrow by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, democrat, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Rogers said she believed Mrs. Engert, wife of the American minister to Ethiopia, would be the first woman to be so honored if the bill were passed.

Mrs. Engert assisted her husband and members of the legation in defending the legation during wild disorders in the Ethiopian capital after Emperor Haile Selassie quit his throne. Only 100 congressional medals have been awarded. Most were for wartime valor.

SAFETY MEASURES URGED.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 10.—(P)—A call to motorists to guard against faulty door locks on their cars was issued here today by Asher Frank, state safety director. "In the past 60 days," he said, "five persons have been killed in Florida by automobile doors coming open. Three of these were children."

Honors Mothers in Sermon at Church Here

REV. ROGER W. STONE.

Mothers of World Are Next to God In Character Molding, Pastor Says

(Editor's Note—This is the 67th of a series of articles dealing with Atlanta pastors and their services. Additional articles will appear on succeeding Mondays.)

Basing his sermon yesterday on Mothers' Day, the Rev. Roger W. Stone, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Episcopal church, declared that mothers stand next to God in the molding of characters of men. The motherhood of the world is the life of the world and we should honor our mothers by being true to the ideals they taught us, the pastor declared.

He said in part: "Honor thy Mother." These words are recorded in the twentieth chapter of Exodus. Men have honored mothers for a long time, but not until the last century have the mothers received due honor. All men of all nations love their mothers today. A few years ago a college professor asked a group of more than 600 students in the senior class of college.

"What is the most beautiful word in the English language?" These students were to answer this question without consulting anybody else. More than 400 of the students answering said the word "mother" is the most beautiful. On this Mothers' Day we recognize not only the word mother as being beautiful, but all that is associated with mother.

Co-worker With God.

"Mothers stand next to God in the molding of the characters of men. A mother is a co-worker with God in that she helps fashion the souls of her children more than any other person. A mother is the first to interpret God to her child. She lets the light of heaven down to him. A mother instills righteous motives, and holy conceptions in her children's lives. Virtue as well as chivalry have their beginnings at the feet of men's mothers. For these reasons, all greatness that is achieved in this life is due to these great truths that began at our mother's side. All men do not have to be great in this world to honor her, but she is honored when men live out all the truths that she taught."

"If we are to honor mother, we can best do so by being brave and having moral courage, by self-forgetfulness, by purity, by religious faith, simple, earnest and sincere. When we compare these preceding qualities with our own, then we can know just how far we have gone in the faith of our mother and what honor we are giving her."

Motherhood Sacred.

"The motherhood of the world is the life of the world. And this is from God, it is sacred. We should honor our mothers in the only fitting manner by being true to the ideals they taught us. Then shall motherhood be exalted and heaven brought closer to earth."

"Today we associate the word mother with prayer because it was mother who taught us to pray. When we hear the stories of the Bible, think of the moment some one helped a childish heart in moment of distress, and remember a love that is undying, we think of mother. These things are sacred because they come from mothers. And the hope for the mothers of the future that they shall ever preserve the noble characteristics and virtues of the mothers of the past, and that men shall ever honor mothers as they are honored today."

"A mother can not be the mother her child has the right to expect of her unless she be endowed with the love of God, and a child can never give mother the honor she deserves unless God be in the heart of the child. After all, all virtue and all honor is God's."

TRAMMELL'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAYBody and Congressional Escort En Route to Lakeland Home.

LAKELAND, Fla., May 10.—(P)—The funeral party accompanying the remains of the late Senator Trammell, of Florida, was en route from the national capital to Lakeland tonight and was due to arrive in the senator's home city at 4:30 a. m. (Atlanta time) Monday.

Funeral services for the statesman who never admitted defeat in a political campaign will be held in the city auditorium here at 4 o'clock (Atlanta time) Monday afternoon. The body will lie in state in the auditorium.

The Rev. James S. Day Jr., pastor of the Southside Baptist church, of Lakeland, will officiate at the funeral services, assisted by Rev. C. E. Wyatt, of the First Christian church, Rev. C. A. Raymond, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. E. Ellis, of the First Methodist church. Interment will be in Roselawn cemetery here.

Leaders of public affairs in Florida and members of a delegation representing the congress of the United States will serve as honorary pallbearers. Heading the list of those requested by Mrs. Beatrice Trammell, the widow, to serve as honorary pallbearers was Governor Dave Sholtz, of Florida. Three former governors were asked to serve as honorary pallbearers. These were Cary Hardee, John Martin and Doyle Carlton.

Past and present members of the Florida delegation in congress also were among those named as honorary pallbearers, including former Senator W. H. Milton, of Marianna, and Representatives W. J. Sears, Millard Caldwell and J. Hardin Peterson.

In the funeral party with Mrs. Trammell were Judge Worth Trammell, of Miami, brother of the senator; Mrs. Walter S. Jenkins, of Marion, S. C., a sister; Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia; Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana; Representative Sears; W. L. Hill, secretary to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida; Senator P. A. Hatch, of New Mexico, and Mark Trice, assistant secretary at arms of the senate.

CONVENTION OF BAKERS WILL OPEN TOMORROW

More Than 100 Expected
For Two-Day Session of State Group.

More than a hundred bakers and allied trade representatives are expected to attend the opening of the two-day spring convention of the Georgia Bakers' Association at the Ansley hotel tomorrow morning, according to the president of the association, E. F. Hazel, of Atlanta.

Registration begins at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning and the first session, which is scheduled for 10:30 o'clock will be a round-table discussion of the problems and trade evils existing in the industry in the state. It will be open to bakers only. L. M. Collins, Atlanta, will act as discussion chairman.

The afternoon session will begin with a luncheon on the Ansley roof at 1 o'clock and will be open to both bakers and allied men. A luncheon for the ladies attending the convention will be held at the same time at the Atlanta Athletic Club, followed by bridge.

The second session of the meeting will feature an address by W. E. Long, Chicago, nationally-known figure of the baking industry. He is expected to speak on the national problems of the industry.

Another feature of the afternoon session will be a play depicting wastes in a bakery, entitled "Costs! What do they tell you?" and will be put on under the direction of Lee Holley, with a cast composed of George Wentz, Clarence Funk, Ben Lacy and Jake Williams, Frank Rowsey and C. M. McMillan, secretary of the Georgia association, all of Atlanta, and Tom Hull, of Birmingham.

A meeting of the board of directors is scheduled for 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and a dinner-dance and floor show on the Ansley roof tomorrow night. The entertainment is under the direction of Lee Holley, who is acting as host to the convention.

The final session will be held Wednesday morning, with a blind golf tournament at the East Lake Country Club Wednesday afternoon. The latter is being arranged by O. W. Miller, Harry Collins and Joe Fisch. The closing session will be open to bakers only and will continue the discussions begun at the tomorrow morning session. New officers, elected by the board of directors, will be inducted into office at the close of the session.

unforeseen incidents, Azana will guide Spain's destiny until 1942.

The premier was extremely reluctant to abandon active politics but various parties decided he was the only candidate acceptable to them all. Azana consented to run under protest because as president it means he must forsake active direction of the most powerful parliamentary groups. He is leader of the left republican party.

When the result was announced the electors burst into cheers and song. The extreme left wing sang the Internationale.

Azana succeeds Niceto Alcalá Zamora, who was removed from the presidency on a charge of malfeasance by parliament April 7, following a leftist victory in February elections.

Augusto Barcia y Trelles, minister of state, was named acting premier.

of Georgia. Hence I am told it is perfectly clear that the judgment does not in any way bar me from bringing a quo warranto suit.

"The opinion is not the judgment. Usually, but not always, opinions are followed in other cases. I am told that our law provides that where the opinion is unanimous it must be followed unless the court unanimously thinks otherwise; but where the opinion is not unanimous a majority of the court as then constituted in a later case may adopt a different view.

"This opinion is far from unanimous. Judge Gordon Knox dissented from it entirely. Justice Beck, as I understand his opinion, concurred in the judgment of reversal only because he thought a suit in equity could not be brought. The fact that he concurred in the judgment does not mean that he concurred in the opinion as to who was treasurer.

One Justice Concurred.
"This leaves only one justice of the supreme court who concurred in that opinion, with three superior court judges.
"As just pointed out, this opinion is not binding in another suit. In a quo warranto case there would be no disqualified members of the supreme court, hence three of the four judges who expressed the opinion that Daniel was treasurer will not be members of the court when a quo warranto comes before it.

"To summarize the matter, three things must be borne in mind about this decision:

(1) No judgment whatever has been rendered as between Daniel and myself.
(2) The opinion of three superior court judges and one justice of the supreme court not being a unanimous opinion is not binding on a majority of the supreme court in a later case.

(3) Only one of the court which would pass on a quo warranto case has by this opinion expressed a view adversely to my position. Hence such case coming before the supreme court would come before six justices, five of whom have expressed no opinion on the subject and are in no way bound by what has happened.

Duty to Bring Suit.
"It is obviously my duty to bring a quo warranto suit. I have repeatedly stated that my purpose is to protect the funds of the state of Georgia from unlawful use. Up to the present it had appeared that the best way to do this was without filing a quo warranto suit. This decision makes it absolutely necessary that I proceed with such a quo warranto. I will do so with the knowledge that the present decision in no way binds the supreme court when such a quo warranto case comes before it, and in no way indicates any opinion adverse to me on the part of five of the six justices who will then pass on the question."

Some labor men expected the council to reiterate the federation's non-partisan political policy. They explained, however, that a "non-partisan" policy meant vigorous support for friends of labor in the election regardless of party—not a hands-off policy.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., May 10. (AP)—John W. Pollard, president of the Spartan Mills' local of the United Textile Workers of America, said tonight that the local had struck tonight and pickets were on duty about the mill gates.

Pollard said the local's position would be made clear in a statement later. He indicated that the statement may not be prepared until tomorrow. He declined to comment on the cause.

FIRE BOARD WILL VOTE ON NEW ENGINES TODAY

Two Pumps Said Necessary To Keep Department Ready for Emergencies.

Additional apparatus for Atlanta's crack fire-fighting outfit will be voted on at 8 o'clock tonight at a meeting of the Atlanta board of firemasters called by Councilman Walter M. Sutton, chairman. New equipment is necessary to keep the department ready for any emergency, according to Chief J. O. Parker and other fire officials.

Two 1,500-gallon pumps will be added if the recommendation of a subcommittee is approved tonight. The largest pumps now in service are of 1,000-gallon capacity. Councilman Sutton said, and the new equipment will give eight hose lines a maximum of 200 feet of hose.

One of the new pumps will be placed at the headquarters station, on Alabama street, and the other at the No. 8 station, on Spring street, it was said.

No immediate danger is felt from the present apparatus, but an emergency which called for continuous use of one of the present pumps for 20 or 30 hours might find it unequal to the task when demanded of it.

A reduction in fire insurance rates in the city will not result immediately from the purchase, it was declared, but with the department's record of the past five years, members of the board declared they felt justified in asking for a 25 per cent reduction and believed it would be granted.

Reports here were that the local had voted to strike in sympathy with workers of the Gaffney Manufacturing Company where a strike has been in progress some time. The same management.

adopted by the council declaring there will be no recognition of territories acquired by force. Sweden was reported so indignant over Italy's defiance of the League that it favored expelling Italy from membership.

An impression prevailed, however, that neither the Italo-Ethiopian nor the Locarno problems would have a detailed examination at this session of the council. It was expected to adjourn Wednesday or Thursday to meet again in the latter part of June.

League Must Continue.

Efforts of the League to safeguard peace must continue at all costs, regardless of the outcome of the Italo-Ethiopian struggle, representatives of seven "neutral" countries agreed at a conference.

They avoided specific discussion of Mussolini's annexation of Ethiopia. They earnestly examined flaws in the League's peace machinery and discussed the necessity of revision to make it workable under present world conditions.

Represented at the meeting were Norway, Sweden, Denmark, The Netherlands, Finland, Spain and Switzerland. These nations were neutral in the League's peace machinery and discussed the necessity of revision to make it workable under present world conditions.

Article XVI, the punitive article of the League covenant which obligates all members to join in sanctions against any nation resorting to aggression was given particular scrutiny.

Some of the neutral statesmen felt Article XVI is proving more of a drag in the League's peace machinery than a rescuing tendency of aggression—a tendency likely to prove extremely dangerous for neutrals in a European conflict.

Article XIX, which provides for revision of treaties, also was discussed. A strengthening of this article, it was felt, might forestall future conflicts.

No definite program of League reform was agreed on, however, the neutrals preferring to wait and see the work of the big powers. Great Britain and France undoubtedly will set the policy to be followed by the League of sessions opening tomorrow.

A communiqué said: "Representatives of the seven states were unanimous in reaffirming their deep interest in the work of the League. They exchanged views as to the consequences of current developments with respect to the organization and the functioning of the League."

Talk of the necessity of a radical reform of the League fills the air on the eve of the 92nd session of the council.

Some want the League made stronger—given a policeman's stick—given a real army big enough to prevent any country from starting a war.

Others want the League reduced to an organism of conciliation—in other words—to see scrapped the famous Article XVI.

It is under this article that the League decreed economic and financial sanctions against Italy. It is under this article, also, that the League could, if it so desired, initiate military sanctions.

The League's agenda and the whole delicate atmosphere of Europe combined to make the session one of extreme importance.

Rhine Report Awaited.
Germany's occupation of her Rhine province, in violation of the Locarno treaty figures on the council's agenda officially, the council awaits some report from the "Locarno" powers.

At its special London meeting, the council found that the German government has committed a breach of Article 43 of the treaty of Versailles by sending German troops into the Rhine zone to enter and establish themselves in the demilitarized zone referred to in Article 43 and the following articles of that treaty and in the Locarno pact.

Germany rejected certain proposals made by Britain, France and Belgium, including one for the withdrawal of German forces from the French and Belgian frontier, another for the dispatch of an international force on the German side of these frontiers, and a third for submitting to the League of Nations the question of whether the Franco-Soviet pact is incompatible with the treaty of Locarno.

Adolf Hitler came back with a comprehensive peace plan for Europe based essentially on bilateral pacts of non-aggression. France, discontented with Germany's attitude and Germany's scheme, came in with a French plan proposing the creation of European commission, operating within the framework of the League, which would have at its disposal, military, naval and air forces.

The days preceding the council session were marked by the dispatch of a series of questions to the German government to Germany. These were calculated to obtain a clarification of Hitler's proposals.

armchair," as a French official expressed it.

2. The failure to achieve reform would automatically mean a return to the old system of alliances.

3. Now that Premier Mussolini has gained colonial "breathing space" in Africa and Asia, by his own pronouncement, has satisfied Germany's craving for equality, a desperate effort must be made to reconstruct the League on the basis of a new all-European security set-up, including Berlin.

A return to the old system of secret alliances and counter-alliances, said reports from Paris, would be automatic for France if the League collapses. France already has agreements with Russia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia and military guarantees from Great Britain and Belgium which only the thin veneer of the League covenant prevents from being outright alliances.

France, it is understood, is willing to join Great Britain in a policy of playing Mussolini and Hitler against each other, and letting the two dictators fight it out in Austria and the Balkans where both seek supremacy.

German officials are scornful of collective security and indifferent to the fate of the League, believing in their own prescription for European peace—bilateral non-aggression pacts between the powers.

In Rome it was pointed out that the fascist grand council in 1933 advocated a reform of the League. Despite Il Duce's scathing criticisms of the League and his threat to leave Geneva, he is known to be heartily in favor of the League's continuing to function.

Otherwise, officials said, he long ago would have followed the example of Japan and Germany and walked out of the council chamber.

In Moscow it was stated that the soviet union favors reorganization of the League to permit really effective economic sanctions, backed by a new system of collective security which would bring about a permanent peace against the aggressor, thus supporting the League's economic sanctions.

pression, but well-informed circles said Italy's attitude at Geneva tomorrow would be a rigid one.

An empire has been created and its emperor named, they said, and these are accomplished facts which admit no change. The League has no jurisdiction any longer and must keep "hands off," fascists argued.

They assert a continuance of sanctions will not change Italy's attitude but will simply increase her irritation and postpone the time when she can resume collaboration in Europe's problems.

Continuance Hit.

Continuance of sanctions after the accomplished fact of establishment of the Italian empire would be regarded by Italy as an attempt to take revenge on her because of her successes.

Troops under Marshal Pietro Badoglio, yesterday named viceroy of Ethiopia, moved down from Addis Ababa on the Djibouti railroad today, and met troops under the new marshal, Rodolfo Graziani, at Dire Dawa.

Other Italian troops moved farther down the railroad and occupied the Ethiopian frontier post of Danile on the French-Somali border.

Dispatches from Addis Ababa said four bus lines had been installed there and that the first train with provisions was due today. Italians installed their motorized littering (gasoline-motored streamlined railroad coaches) on the Djibouti-Addis Ababa line, cutting the time of travel in half.

ADDIS ABABA DEATH TOLL IS ESTIMATED AT 800.

ADDIS ABABA, May 10.—(AP)—As the search in the ruins of this devastated city widened today, unofficial estimates placed the death toll in the rioting and looting which followed Emperor Haile Selassie's departure at more than 800.

A deathly carpet of the Italian assault presented a start on rebuilding the city.

The exodus of fascists from the conquered land already had started. Both Benito Mussolini and Count Ciano and Vittorio, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Il Duce's son-in-law, were preparing to leave for Massawa, Eritrea by plane, thence by boat to Rome.

Both Vittorio, 19, and Bruno, 17, were awarded medals for their achievements as officers in the east African air force during the war of only a little more than seven months.

Count Ciano also was given a silver medal for his work as commander of the desperate squadron of fliers.

Many officers are making attempts to leave their native Italy, now that the fighting is apparently over.

The departure of diplomats is expected soon, as representatives of foreign governments have been informed they no longer have official positions, inasmuch as Italy claims Ethiopia no longer exists as a separate state.

Members of the Swedish legation were preparing to leave this week.

The staff of the American legation was awaiting instructions from Washington.

A great crowd of Italian officers and bronzed soldiers heard Premier Mussolini's speech in Rome last night by radio. At the end of the address, Mussolini's sons and the other Italian officers toasted the "new empire" with champagne.

field men throughout the country contained similar expressions.

From R. E. Shepherd, northeastern Texas district director, came a letter citing a "scarcity of skilled labor," due in part to construction activities in connection with the Texas Centennial.

Harold D. Conney, director of the Cincinnati FEA district, reported that "there is considerable fear in Cincinnati that there will be a shortage of skilled labor as soon as the building season opens up."

A "strong" demand for skilled labor by private industry was cited by W. G. Bingham, associate director of the southern California district.

Conditions in Tucson.
From Tucson, Ariz., State Director Thomas J. Elliott wrote that "conditions in Tucson are particularly good, with builders complaining that their construction has been greatly retarded through lack of carpenters and bricklayers."

Other comments:
Richard A. Tullis, southwestern Texas district director—"One of the large lumber yards here in San Antonio informed me that the labor situation in the building line is becoming increasingly serious."

Maurice Carroll, western Missouri district director—"The lumber company advised their men enough repair work to carry them through the month of July and that all available craftsmen are busily employed on modernization work."

George E. Matt, Oklahoma district director—"There is an acute shortage of artisans, not only in Tulsa, but in most of the towns of the district. The average age of the average construction artisan is around 56 years, and for the past six or seven years there has been no construction activity. Therefore, no apprentices have been trained."

Similar reports were received from the northern California district, Washington, D. C., and certain other scattered areas for which correspondence was not available.

SEX-MANIAC SOUGHT IN Y. W. C. A. SLAYING

Hobo Hangouts Combed; 6
Loiterers Held in Brutal Murder.

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Hobo hangouts in lakefront parks near the loop were combed clean by police tonight for a sex-mad roustabout with greying brown hair and strong hands—the stranger who killed Mrs. Lillian Gould, 50-year-old widow, in her Y. W. C. A. hotel room.

Thirty-eight loiterers were taken into custody for questioning as the search went on under the personal direction of Captain John Prendergast, chief of uniformed police.

Conversation, hair and muscular build of casuals were scrutinized with special care by investigators seeking to tie down the killer with a stop apparently taken from Grant park and a strand of greyed brown hair clutched in the dead woman's fist. There was a chance the hair was the widow's own—there was a resemblance—but police thought it more likely the strand came from the head of the man who choked Mrs. Gould so viciously her larynx ruptured.

The stone, used to smash the widow's skull, appeared to have come from a pile on a WPA job near Sherman's monument in the park opposite the hotel.

Captain Prendergast said he was convinced the killing of the former Attleboro, Mass., woman early Saturday "was a sex crime by a man of morose tendencies."

"I think the slayer went to the room with the intention of attacking the woman," he added. "Of course, he knew it was a Y. W. C. A., or from loitering in the park he may have noticed that only women stayed there."

As the police reconstructed the crime the invader clambered up a fire escape on one side of the building, across the roof and down the other side to drop several feet from a landing into the open window of the widow's second floor room. The building is barred off, unused, above the second floor.

With him, according to this version of what happened, the killer carried a six-pound slab of stone and a long coil of insulated wire. The wire was unused, but the stone battered in Mrs. Gould's skull after a battle in which her nightgown was torn to shreds.

UNCLE CONFESSES ARKANSAS AX DEATH

Second-Hand Clothier Says Niece-Housekeeper Took Money From Him.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 10.—(AP)—Chief of Detectives J. O. McDougal, of North Little Rock, announced tonight a man booked as Charles Haney, 55, second-hand clothing dealer, had confessed to the ax-slaying of Mrs. Essie McCloister, his 23-year-old niece.

McDougal said the man broke after a 24-hour grilling and signed a written confession to the slaying. A murder charge will be filed against him tomorrow.

McDougal quoted the second-hand clothing dealer as saying he killed the young woman early Thursday, kept her body hidden under a quilt in an abandoned mule barn in the rear of the store and dumped it in the Arkansas river early Friday after hauling it several blocks in a wheelbarrow.

Mrs. McCloister, who North Little Rock police said was Haney's niece and housekeeper, came to Haney's combined store and living quarters about 6 a. m. Shortly afterwards, the officer quoted Haney, the woman arose and dressed and removed a billfold from his pocket, saying she was leaving. A fight followed his attempt to regain possession of his money.

9-YEAR-OLD KILLS SELF WHEN WISH IS DENIED

HOPEWELL, Va., May 10.—(AP)—Police Chief George G. Anderson said that James Newbold, 9, shot and fatally wounded himself this afternoon when he was refused permission to visit his grandmother.

Dr. W. C. Webb, Prince George's coroner, said he was investigating the child's death tonight and would hold an inquest later.

Lewis Wilson, a neighbor, said he heard a shot and saw the boy fall in the yard of his home in New Point City, a Hopewell suburb. He was shot through the right temple and a .32-caliber revolver lay a few inches from his hand. Young Newbold died a short time afterward at a Hopewell hospital.

Gainesville Square Is Again Scene of Thriving Trade

A month ago a city of death and tornado-heaped debris, Gainesville yesterday was busily engaged in rebuilding and experiencing what was described by merchants as the best Saturday business in several months. Rural folk poured into town, parking their automobiles, trucks and wagons two deep around the park in the square. They traded in stores some of which replaced demolished buildings. Here is a general scene, showing new stores and crowds flocking in to buy. Note the "tornado sale" sign. Leaves are appearing on the sturdy trees which weathered the stone-crushing tornado. Gainesville Rises From Wreckage To Do Biggest Business of Year

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—A month ago a city of death and tornado-heaped debris, Gainesville today surveyed double indicators of rapidly returning recovery—far-advanced rehabilitation and the best Saturday business since January.

The hum of the saw and the ring of the cash register coalesced into a note of reconstruction and retrieved financial losses resulting from temporary cessation of business after the tornado that left more than 200 dead and untold property damage.

Rural folk poured into the town, parking their automobiles, trucks and wagons two deep around the court in the city square.

They traded in stores some of which literally rose from tornado wreckage. The majority of the businesses are operating in temporary quarters as heavy construction work swings into its stride.

W. E. Dozier, secretary of the city commission, says fully 85 per cent of the once-paralyzed businesses have resumed operation.

He pointed to building permits of $244,238 to date as an indicator of the rapidly with which reconstruction is going forward.

"This figure largely is represented by repairs to stores and other commercial houses in the downtown district," Dozier said. "Rebuilding of razed houses in the residential section hasn't gotten under way to a noticeable extent as yet. But what homes are going up are more modern and costly."

He said that by the fall of the year all business places on the square should be rebuilt.

Two blocks of the square—practically leveled by the twister—are reconstructed with more modern structures, presenting attractive fronts and display windows.

"Open for business" and "tornado sale" signs catch the eyes of hundreds of buyers.

A. C. McEver, who is operating his clothing store in new quarters, observed that business generally is the best since January.

"Of course, this is a flurry," he said, "but everything points to an early return to normalcy."

His expression was typical of those from other merchants.

The WPA, employing 600 common and skilled laborers at the task of clearing debris, is dumping approximately $1,000 daily into trade channels in wages.

H. F. Peizer, WPA official, said crews are still removing debris from the business district and that work would begin in the stricken residential sections within the next month.

The RFC reported $1,000,000 catastrophe loans approved locally with $1,300,000 being sought.

An official said this money soon would begin to sit in.

Banks reported a 35 per cent increase in deposits since the tornado and contractors are releasing thousands of dollars in purchase of materials and payment of wages to employees.

Hospitals are practically bereft of storm casualties but first aid relief stations are continuing in three sections. They are operated by the Red Cross, which also is running the "small businessman in rehabilitation."

Penney, Phillips Petroleum, Proctor & Gamble, Socoy-Vacuum, Standard Oil of California, Indiana and New Jersey; Texas Gulf Sulphur, United Fruit and F. W. Woolworth.

Byrd is one of a group of democrats on the senate finance committee trying to evolve some substitute for the administration tax program.

Compromise Attempt.

New Deal leaders, seeking adjournment by early June, are expected to attempt compromise within a day or two.

They still insist the "philosophy" of President Roosevelt's plan for a tax on undistributed profits will be approved, but concede the house bill will be changed in some form.

(Under the house bill corporations would be taxed up to 42 1-2 per cent on their net income, depending upon how much was not distributed. If all profits were distributed the corporations would pay no taxes).

The most discussed proposal for a compromise is to continue the present corporate taxes, with a levy on undistributed income superimposed, and with all dividends subject to the normal income tax of 4 per cent.

Deficiency Bill.

The house will pass tomorrow the $2,364,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill carrying $1,425,000,000 for relief. This is the last of the so-called "must" measures.

The senate appropriations committee is ready to begin work on the relief bill as soon as it comes from the house. Plans have been made to investigate administration of the $4,800,000,000 fund voted last year—a proceeding which will delay action.

The senate will turn Tuesday to the commodity exchange regulation bill, after recessing tomorrow out of respect for Senator Trammell, of Florida, who died Friday.

WOOLEN WORKERS THREATEN STRIKE

Nation-Wide Walkout Is Proposed To Enforce Demands.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 10.—(UP)—The executive council of the woolen and worsted department of the United Textile Workers of America announced tonight it planned a general nation-wide strike in the industry to enforce demands for a 35-hour work week and a 20 per cent wage increase.

Similar action had been recommended at a meeting of national United Textile Workers of America officials in New York last week.

Despite the council's attitude, it was announced no definite strike action would be taken until the group convenes again within the next six weeks here. Formal demands on manufacturers would be made soon, it was said.

Meanwhile, officials said locals throughout the country would be notified of action taken at today's meeting.

The proposed walk-out was recommended to the council by President Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers of America.

"Some drastic action is necessary to accomplish the social and industrial improvements long sought by the operators," he said.

win the President over through petitions designed to bind the democrats in party caucus to vote for the demands.

Secretary Ickes yesterday followed the house action with an order for a 25 per cent cut in the WPA administrative staff.

He ordered both Washington and field division heads to submit at once lists of employees who could be dropped from the pay rolls, and simultaneously forbade any more pay increases. The cut itself, however, was not effective immediately, officials explained.

Taber Resolution.

The house will vote tomorrow on a motion by Representative Taber, republican, New York, to send the bill back to the appropriations committee with instructions to write in his amendment—defeated Friday—to substitute locally administered state grants, with 25 per cent local contributions, for the WPA program.

Leaders said the Taber motion was certain to be defeated. The final roll call will follow it.

The measure also carries $458,631,860 for the social security program and $39,900,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Physically Handicapped tonight left Works Progress Administration headquarters—where they had encamped for 24 hours—to stay in lodgings provided by the WPA.

ATLANTA, GA., MAY 11, 1936.

TARVER LEADS THE WAY.

The enactment of a prohibitory tax on oleomargarine and other products containing cottonseed oil by the Wisconsin legislature, which act was soundly condemned by the state's leading newspaper, introduction of two measures in the federal congress, proposing a nationwide tax of similar nature by representatives from Wisconsin and New York; and agitation for prohibitive taxes in New York, New Jersey and Ohio, have aroused a storm of resentment throughout the eleven cotton states of the south, and resulted in the organization of the Southwide Association of Consumers, the object of which is to combat this unjust discrimination of healthful products, one of the chief ingredients of which is cottonseed oil—a product of the south.

With characteristic energy, logic and common-sense argument, Judge Malcolm C. Tarver, representative of the Seventh congressional district of Georgia, recently entered the first line of defense against this unjust legislation, charging that "anything which is calculated to bring about a controversy of this sort cannot fail to be harmful to all sections of the country which may engage in that controversy."

Addressing the house of representatives, Congressman Tarver said:

"The people of the south have been very much disturbed recently by the passage of discriminatory legislation in Wisconsin, and the consideration of such legislation in certain other states, notably the state of New Jersey, where it is proposed to bar, or to impose a prohibitive tax upon the use and sale of oleomargarine, in the supposed purpose of bringing about benefits to the dairy industry. Cottonseed oil is one of the most important constituents of oleomargarine, and the cotton growers of the south are naturally very much concerned by the enactment of any legislation which proposes to place a handicap upon the marketing of their products. The result has been to bring about in the south an organization of consumers, known as the Southwide Association of Consumers. One of its purposes is to bring about the removal of this discriminatory legislation and the banding together of consumers against the purchasing and consumption of products from states which have enacted legislation of the discriminatory character to which I have referred. This is indeed a very unfortunate situation. Everything possible should be done to facilitate the exchange of products between the agricultural sections of the country, and the passage of legislation by states attempting to prevent the purchase and consumption by their citizens of the legitimate and healthful food product of the undemocratic, un-American, and, in my opinion, unconstitutional."

Congressman Tarver then asked for and received unanimous consent to have placed on record a letter written by J. D. Beck, Wisconsin Commissioner of Agriculture, to Mrs. R. L. Turman, of Atlanta, president of the Southwide Association of Consumers, in which he assailed the objects of the association; charged that oleomargarine possessed little food value, being deleterious to health of consumers; gave the results of some experiments upon rats (but not with human beings), and asserted that only a very small percentage of cottonseed oil figured in the manufacture of oleomargarine.

By request of Congressman Tarver Mrs. Turman's answer to Commissioner Beck was also included in the record, it containing a complete refutation of all of the charges made by the commissioner, with the exception that the association was being assisted financially by the manufacturers of cottonseed oil products. One of her most crushing replies to Commissioner Beck's innuendo follows:

"Surely you must know that margarine is accepted by the medical authorities as equally nourishing, as wholesome, as easily digested as butter. If it were 'destructive to health,' as you indicate, the Pure Food and Drug Administration of the Department of Agriculture should put it off the market. Certainly, if it were not a wholesome food, there would have been some cases against it during the past year, when notices of judgment were issued by United States Food and Drug Administration and 3,821 separate shipments of food were prosecuted in the federal courts as violations of the Pure Food and Drug Act. Of this number not one was against margarine, while 2,558, or 67 per cent, involved shipments of cream and butter (see enclosed copy of article reprinted from the March issue of Veterinary Medicine, which describes these federal cases against butter and cream under the caption: 'Filthy, putrid, moldy, rancid, and decomposed'). So, you see, it is not margarine, as your letter would indicate, that is offending our pure food laws."

Wisconsin is a large exporter of butter, cream, milk and cheese, but she also exports immense quantities of manufactured products, a goodly proportion of which find sale in the southern cotton states. None of these states will act to put a prohibitive tax on automobiles, farm implements and machinery made in Wisconsin, but it is conceivable to imagine a farmer declining to buy the products of a state which would pass discriminatory taxes against one of his principal products.

There is no occasion for the dairy interests of New York being alarmed at the sale of oleomargarine, since that state yearly imports millions of pounds of butter from other states. Butter imports of New Jersey and Ohio are small in comparison, but neither are entirely self-supporting.

The federal constitution specifically prohibits tariff discriminations between the several states, and prohibitive taxes levied by a state against the products of one or more states, would appear to come within that meaning.

Congressman Tarver will be highly commended by the entire south for his vigorous defense against this unjust discrimination, and he should have the energetic support of every senator and congressman from the cotton states.

DIFFICULT TO CONVINCE.

Assailing relief measures as wasteful, Governor Landon, of Kansas, apparently overlooks the fact that government relief money poured into Kansas during the height of the depression, assumed a great part of the relief burden of his state, and aided him greatly in his much-touted budget balancing.

At the same time AAA benefit payments to farmers of Kansas had much to do with lifting that great agricultural state out of the slough of despond and building it up to its present degree of prosperity.

"What young people of America really need, and earnestly desire, is not relief, but opportunity," declared the Governor. A correct statement of the facts—and they got relief when relief was needed, and now that times are better they are afforded opportunity. Colleges and universities from the Atlantic to the Pacific report a greater demand at higher wages for graduates this year than in any year since 1932. If college graduates are in demand for "white collar" positions it follows that there are more jobs and better wages for all classes of workers.

"What the nation needs is a revival of confidence," the Governor declared. He overlooks the fact that the record since March 4, 1933, has largely restored the confidence of the nation; that some of the leading industrial corporations' profits last year approached close to their highest records, that farmers of every section are paying back taxes, old debts, buying new machinery and needed household appliances; citizens everywhere have hope for the future, and that hope is inspired by the achievements of the New Deal and by the determination which brought it about will not be changed by election this fall.

Again Governor Landon says: "I believe that the real issue before the American people today is not whether you are better off now than you were in 1933; the real question is: Have we made as much progress in coming out of this depression as you have a reasonable right to expect?"

That we have to a great measure recovered from the worst depression in the history of the country, in which not only the United States, but the entire world was involved, apparently is of small consequence. As to whether our progress has been as rapid as we could "reasonably expect" is a theoretical question, to which the only practical answer is "yes."

A long period of republican misrule, climaxing with the iniquitous Hawley-Smoot tariff law and approval of Wall street stock-price inflation, in addition to world-wide economic conditions, precipitated the depression, into which we sank deeper and deeper.

When the crash came the republican leaders could suggest nothing, but the democratic administration did. And it has obtained results.

A photograph taken at an altitude of 72,395 feet over South Dakota proves the earth is round, with Wilbur Voliva somewhere beyond the eastern horizon.

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

Meat eating animals seem to fatten more readily on a diet containing considerable carbohydrate (starches and sugars). On an ordinary mixed diet man seems to oxidize carbohydrates to yield muscular energy and warmth more readily than fats and if the diet is well balanced and adequate in all respects the fat is more readily deposited in the tissues. But if the diet is deficient in minerals and vitamins and excessive in the proportion of carbohydrates—as our diet generally is—the excess of carbohydrate material unquestionably goes to form fat.

A common notion harbored by fat folk is that the potato is fattening. In fact potato is only one-third as fattening as bread. That is, three pounds of potato is equal to one pound of bread in its fattening value.

Choosing this and that item and eschewing other items on the menu, in the belief that one can control weight that way, is a futile scheme anyway. If the particular foods one eats or does not eat that determines the state of nutrition, but rather the grand total of food consumed day by day as measured or estimated in calories.

Refined carbohydrates are the cheapest, most available, most delectable and easiest to eat even when one is not particularly hungry. Most any one can take a dish of ice cream, a bit of cake, a sweetened beverage or some candy at any time and feel better. Most any one can eat a square meal which is more or less adequate, then, because it is customary, top it off with dessert which is chiefly carbohydrate and represents just too much excess nutriment. If any wonder corpulency is so common after 30?

If excessive flesh were merely unbecoming it would not concern us. But the accumulation of fat is a displacement after the age of 30 definitely shortens expectation of life, and so in the interest of longevity we must recognize it as an important health problem. Not only that, but it handicaps every physiological process, and imposes on the individual a lower level, a slower pace in living. However, most women and many men who desire to reduce are prompted by vanity rather than any consideration of longevity or health.

Persons who do honest work or play every day are less likely to accumulate excessive fat than are those who live by their wits or as parasites on others. Probably the best anti-fat prescription is one that calls for two miles of walking three times a day, on the hoof. Exercise of any kind increases oxygen absorption, oxidation, metabolism. In some states of slow or subnormal metabolism, notably hypothyroidism or myxedema, the individual lacks inclination to work or play, prefers to sit or lie and mope or vegetate. In such cases judgment is essential, to correct the faulty metabolism and place the patient in a "free to reduce" condition. In the majority of cases of corpulent patients on a rational physiological reduction regimen notice that even before any significant change in weight they feel more inclined to physical activity.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

How to Eat.

Please recommend the best book for a layman to follow in the matter of diet for good health and for controlling the weight. I'd like something practical and in language that I can understand. (Mrs. L. M. S.)

Answer—One of the best I have seen is "Dietetics" by Adelle Davis, nutritionist (California Graphic Press, Los Angeles). The author does an excellent job of interpreting scientific knowledge to the lay mind.

Last Likes Tennis.

Husband, 47, very fond of tennis, had played strenuously the past three years. Enjoys excellent health, but I think he should be examined by a family physician and advised whether tennis is good for him. (Mrs. A. H. C.)

Answer—Certainly, every man or woman over 30 should have an examination by the family physician every year, and get the doctor's advice about health matters. But I'd keep on playing tennis as long as I enjoyed it, if I were in your husband's place.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"SUSTAINED AND GUIDED." Sir Henry Morton Stanley, in his noble search for David Livingstone, tells how he came at last on November 10, 1871, upon the feeble and almost helpless Livingstone at Ujiji, on the Tanganyika. One recalls the romance of that famous meeting, how the natives fell down at the feet of Livingstone and begged him not to leave them, how Livingstone declined the gracious invitation of England to come home from the hardships of the Dark Continent. But the great romance of this notable event was the great explorer going to find a brother explorer was the fact that Livingstone's glorious life among the natives of Africa revealed to Stanley the nobility and the beauty of the Christian religion, and Stanley discovered Christ. He writes:

"Here is a man (Livingstone) who is manifestly sustained as well as guided by influences from heaven. The Holy Spirit dwells in him. God speaks through him. The heroism, the nobility and stainless enthusiasm at his life came from the love of God. There must, therefore, be a Christ, and it is altogether worthwhile to have such a Redeemer, such a Helper, revealing Himself as He does in the wonderful life of His disciple."

Stanley was a scientific man and a businessman, but Stanley recognized that Livingstone possessed something that neither science nor business could produce, and Stanley longed for the sense of strength and peace which he quickly discovered in Livingstone. Here was a cultured gentleman giving his life in the depths of ignorance and poverty, and joyfully so, for Livingstone was exploring human personality, lifting the eyes of the secure and unknown people unto the Hills whence cometh our strength.

What a glorious day this would be in the world's troubled life if every child of God would live like Livingstone lived! There are many Stanleys in the world today, busy with their definite plans and purposes, but all the while yearning for the vision of One who sustains and guides, if we would but lift Him up in all His beauty, in all His power, in all His glory, these hungering, thirsting, seeking hearts all about us, as we share with Stanley in the new-found joy of being "sustained and guided."

First Flag Raised.

The first flag of the United States to be made after the present form was adopted, was raised over the hall of representatives in Washington in 1818.

It was designed by Captain Samuel Chester Reed, U. S. Navy, who with one 7-gun ship fought and defeated a squadron of three British ships with 136 guns in one of the most remarkable naval battles in history (at Payson, in the Azores, in 1814).

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

REMOTE CONTROL. WASHINGTON, May 10.—Mr. Hopkins' WPA crowd did an effective undercover job on congress for their relief bill.

The Hopkins boys worked, apparently, upon the theory that fear is a major emotion in a congressman's make-up. They slyly injected a few terrifying inspirations where these would do the most good, mostly back in the local congressional districts from which congressmen emanate.

Example: A good democratic congressman from an eastern state was leading the fight to snatch some of Mr. Hopkins' money for Mr. Ickes. His enthusiasm was high until he picked up the newspaper from back home one day and read that the local WPA director had said he was "against relief."

HEADLINE VOTERS. People never fully understand issues. The general run of busy citizens read headlines and little else. Undoubtedly the congressman's local citizens have read that he is contesting against the relief bill on some ground or other, which is not clear to them. They probably think the local WPA director was right.

At least the congressman will have a lot of explaining to do to his people to set them right. And when a candidate for office begins explaining, he is lost.

WHIP-SAWED. The same thought has occurred to a lot of other congressmen whose local WPA directors may or may not have planted the idea that resistance to this particular relief bill is "opposition to relief."

Even on the republican side, old-timers have been advising youngsters of the danger of voting against the Hopkins form, the Ickes form or any other form. They well know from experience that it is hard to get the public to differentiate between forms. The big thing is whether or not they voted for the form which was adopted. That is what will stick in the public mind. It becomes a very important factor when you consider that no candidate for public office these days can afford to be classed as against relief, be he democrat, republican or Zioncheck.

ECONOMY. A franker statement of the spending outlook than any which has been published was given secretly to the house democratic caucus by Chairman Buchanan, of the house appropriations committee. He knows the prospects if any does.

According to his tabulation, congress will be appropriated about $10,500,000 by the end of the session, if everything goes along as expected. This includes bonus, relief, etc., but not Frazier-Lemke and things expected to be defeated.

The $10,500,000 figure is just about what the last congress appropriated, indicating that President Roosevelt's progress toward curtailment is exactly nil to date.

What he has been able to save on sundries has been lost on the bonus (another form of spending).

DIPLOMACY. What Messrs. Roosevelt and Hull think of the Italian victory in Ethiopia will never be put into words. But Mussolini knows.

A sarcastic reminder was offered to him when it became apparent that the Italians were hanging around outside Addis Ababa until the Americans, British and French had their fill of savages on the rampage. The United States charge in Rome called at the Italian foreign office and inquired when Italy intended to take measures "to meet its responsibility" with regard to establishing law and order in Addis Ababa. The inquiry had an effect. Mussolini sent his men into Addis Ababa a day ahead of original schedule.

TREATIES. Few are aware of it, but the United States is party to two international treaties making non-recognition of territory acquired by force a definite commitment. Ironically, Italy also is a party to one of these treaties, the Argentine anti-war pact, signed in October, 1931, and adhered to by Italy in March, 1934.

This will direct our decision not to recognize Ethiopia, but apparently it will have no influence on Mussolini that the international agreement not to use poison gas.

PRESTIGE. The Frazier-Lemke bill would go whooping through the house by a 2-to-1 vote today, were it not for one thing. House leaders feel that their personal prestige is involved. The fight made upon them by Father Coughlin stiffened their backs.

In ordinary course, the house would pass the bill and let the senate shoulder the responsibility for keeping it away from Mr. Roosevelt. In that way house members could get the prestige among farmers. In any event, the bill will not become a law. If the house does not kill it, the senate will, and if the senate does not, the President will.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

You do not need a universe All loveliness to find, The infinite in beauty lies Within each rose defined.

Ethereal heights you need not climb, Nor soar to realms apart, When seeking love; love best is found Within a simple heart.

A Present

For Mother. Two negro girls, say about 16 years old, were inspecting the counters in a downtown store of many departments. They eyed the perfumes and toilet articles. Glanced over the stationery and the notions. Looked at ribbons and towels and hats. At last they approached the toy counter.

There was one of those black, mechanical dolls, about 10 inches tall. This one was supposed to be a South Sea Island girl, with a grass skirt and, when you wound up the mechanism, the doll would do a hula dance and the little grass skirt would flip up and down.

The negro girls were delighted. They laughed aloud at the doll in motion. "This 'jes what we wants for mammy's present on Mother's Day," they announced.

Hunting a Bottle of Beer. It is nearly 20 years ago now, but it provides an interesting sidelight, even at this late date, on the era of prohibition.

It was in Greenville, S. C., a city which probably is nearer to enforcing the dry laws, at that time, than most places of its size. This particular afternoon, a friend's remark about a bottle of beer or a cold beer would be. We thus began to think about beer and the more we thought of the brew the more desirable it grew, in imagination.

We went back to the Spartaburg, 30 miles away, the dry enforcement habit was not so ingrained as in Greenville. In fact, we had heard that a little investigation would probably turn up some kind of liquid refreshment, there. So we got in the car and drove to Spartaburg, just for a couple of bottles of beer.

Four Hours Search. We reached our destination about 7 o'clock in the evening and, for the following four hours we hunted beer, in vain.

We interviewed every hotel clerk and bell boy. We visited every restaurant proprietor to help us and we even mentioned the object of our desires to a number of policemen on their beats.

We tried all the drug stores and soft drink fountains and even called upon several negroes working around the local parages. In fact, there were few people up town in Spartaburg that evening to whom we did not appeal. Or so it seemed to us. But no beer.

We were offered corn liquor in wholesale quantity. If we had bought all the pints and quarts and gallons of whiskey proffered, we could have loaded the back of our car and filled a fair-sized truck in addition. But no beer.

On the Way Home, Disappointed. So, about 11 o'clock, we started home for Greenville. Utterly disappointed, because we hadn't found that beer.

There is a place, just this side of Spartaburg, where the road used to wind up a hill and, from the bottom of the grade, you could see it, at intervals, the road ahead for a couple of miles, or so. Near the top of the hill, on this particular night, there was a car parked, with headlights burning. We saw it long before we reached the point ourselves. When we came across a fellow motorist apparently in trouble, we stopped and offered assistance. There hadn't been so many headlights on the road, and no one dreamed it would soon be dangerous to offer the courtesy of help.

So, when we reached the car parked beside the road, we slowed down and hollered: "Need any help?"

Potomac River,

A Historical Stream

Westbrook Pegler is on vacation and his "Fair Enough" will not appear in this page during the next few days.

Water lapped against second story windows as floods brought new threats to property and life in the Potomac valley. Spring rains and melting mountain snows burdened tributary rivers with a load they could not carry.

"Reaching her arms far up into the laurel-laden, pine-clad Appalachians, the historic Potomac river embraces under her bosom mountains, forests, fertile plains, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Indian canoes first swept down its rapids and glided over sleepy reaches. In the search for farm lands beyond the mountain barriers frontiersmen in buckskins followed its windings. Canal boats carried produce over a river route fostered by Georgia Washington. Today the banks of the Potomac and its branches afford to railways level pathways through the folded hills.

Scene of Indian Warfare.

"The turbid, lashing waters of today are mild words compared to those of the human history of the region records. Wars and massacres were frequent a century and a half ago as Indians and white men jangled canoes and paddles in the narrow channel. The Antietam joins the greater stream, warlike Delawareans and marauding Catawbas spilled each other's blood in savage bush-fights. Decades later, red-skinned foes made common cause against invading white pioneers. Red-bellied forts gave scant shelter against tribesmen, roused to anger in defense of their hunting grounds. The gray line of Lee and the blue of McClellan were back and forth across the Potomac as Confederates and Union grappled for conflicting principles.

"Where the noisy Shenandoah foams down to join the Potomac under the shadow of precipitous heights, stands Harper's Ferry, scene of John Brown's famous raid on a government arsenal. Out of the incident came the catchy song that fired marching columns with fighting fervor.

"Farther down the river, at Great Falls, old locks remain of George Washington's Potomac canal, fore-runner of the more ambitious Chesapeake and Ohio canal. Today, the long-unused towpath gives hikers an easy trail along the shaded river banks.

Older Than Washington.

"Still lower, where the river meets the tide, George town, half a century old when Washington was born, sprawls over the hills. Here old mansions reflect the rich life of past years when official and diplomatic society ebbed and flowed over their door-steps. Many considered Washington purely the official seat of administration and Georgetown the place to live.

"The nation's capital before it and its white monuments to Washington and Lincoln are only the most striking landmarks of one of the world's handsomest cities. Capital City, Washington spreads up from an elbow of the Potomac where the swift young river becomes the fuller tidal stream. Ocean breezes reach the city from the estuary to the port of Washington.

"Mt. Vernon's familiar white porticoes top a swelling knoll 16 miles below the capital. Here Farmer George Washington developed his graceful home, surrounded it with flower gardens and, on rich surrounding acres, raised bumper crops of potatoes and beans, fruits and tobacco.

"The Potomac flows from Maryland and Virginia into the Chesapeake Bay, in the annals of America struggling to be born, no official and diplomatic society ebbed and flowed over their door-steps. Many considered Washington purely the official seat of administration and Georgetown the place to live.

Ambition Cannot Plant Ten Acres

If It Has Seed for Only Two

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Primitive man was much like the other animals until he learned to use words. That accomplishment, more than any other, lifted him forever above the level of brutes.

With words he could make his thoughts and desires known to others. He had laid the foundation of all culture.

When he went further and learned to place the words on paper, he became an immortal with the powers of a god. He could speak his mind to men across an ocean; he could speak to generations yet unborn. He had found the way to multiply himself beyond computation.

FOUR PERSONS SLAIN IN WEEK-END VIOLENCE

between two nearby houses following the fight, they reported.

The witnesses also said they heard three shots fired during the fight. The officers reported they found a .32-caliber revolver about 15 feet from Jenkins' body. The gun was later identified as Jenkins' by his wife. A long switch-blade knife, with its blade bent and bloody, was found underneath the body of the victim.

W. H. Lane, 21, of 375 Luckie street, said by police to have been a companion of Jenkins Saturday night, was held yesterday at police headquarters as officers probed the slaying. Lane told the officers, they reported, that he and Jenkins had left Jenkins' house a short time before the fight occurred, but that they had been drinking heavily and he did not remember what had happened.

Trail of Blood.

A police call shortly after midnight yesterday sent Radio Patrolmen M. B. Moss and E. P. Roberts to investigate a stabbing in the 1000 block of Gordon street, and Howard Kilgore, of 680 Lawton street, who said they saw a negro man and woman running up the street, the negro man bleeding profusely.

Following the trail of blood for several blocks, the policemen found a negro dying of stab wounds in the rear of 1132 Ogletowne avenue. He was identified by police as Ed Taylor, alias Reuben Washington, 45. He was suffering from a slash in his throat which reached almost from ear to ear and numerous stab wounds over the body and legs.

The negro died at Grady hospital at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The patrolmen took into custody Mabel Tuglie, negro woman, who lives in the rear of the residence in the 1000 block of Gordon street. Blood and marks of violence were found in her home. According to the officers, the woman said the stabbing had been done by her husband, Bud Tuglie.

Took Out Insurance. Mrs. W. H. Bradley, 1132 Ogletowne avenue, told investigating officers that Taylor lived in the rear of her home and that he recently had taken out an insurance policy naming the Tuglie woman as beneficiary.

Another death occurred early yesterday morning as the result of an argument said to have been over the date of the showing of a motion picture here. Lillie Mae Passmore, 16-year-old negro girl, of 147 Cain street, was stabbed repeatedly about the chest and abdomen, Ed Stewart, negro, of 56 1-2 Boulevard, S. E., was admitted to Grady hospital early yesterday morning in critical condition.

Homey Winn, negro, of the rear of 146 Randolph street, who brought Stewart to the hospital, told police the victim was shot on Randolph street by a negro known as "T. T." The assailant fired five times into Stewart's body at close range with a .32-caliber automatic, Winn told police.

Stabbed in his restaurant at 945 Fair street, S. E., shortly before midnight last night, John T. McElroy, 24, of 1377 McPherson avenue, was admitted to Grady hospital in serious condition from loss of blood.

McElroy told Hospital Patrolman J. J. Elliott he was putting a drunk man out of his place when a companion attacked him with a knife. He suffered a stab wound in the chest and was cut to the bone on his right arm.

Officers H. C. Miller and H. E. Burdett later arrested Joe A. Williams, 51, at his home at 385 Glenwood avenue, and charged him with the stabbing.

"Sky Parade" Opens Run At the Capitol Theater. A thrilling drama of the air which, at the same time, portrays a technically correct and interesting background of the development of commercial aviation from the days immediately after the World War to the present day opened yesterday at the Capitol theater.

Entitled "Sky Parade," the film features William Garman, Katherine DeMille, Kent Taylor and Jimmie Allen. The story is of a man whose guiding ambition is to make flying his life's business. There are numerous thrilling scenes and a delightful climax.

The new stage show is entitled "Dixiana Revue," and brings numerous well known actors and pretty girls before the Capitol's footlights. The unit was produced by Dan Fitch, who hails from the southland and the southern background is particularly pleasing. Numerous production numbers are featured.

Included in the stage show cast are the Williams Sisters, singers; Bob Fisher, magician; Turk McBee Jr., the Dixiana Girls, Dan Fitch, comedian; Sylvia Hanley, singer; Trevor Lewis, radio tenor, Ruth Ritzel, dancer, and others.

The feature film is interesting but not too heavy for hot weather enjoyment and the revue rounds out a well-balanced program which leaves the audience with a sense of satisfaction.

Selassie Suffers Nervous Collapse After Listening to Duce on Radio

JERUSALEM, May 10.—(UP)—Emperor Haile Selassie, fugitive king of Ethiopia, suffered a nervous collapse today.

The news came from a G. W. Waugh, British high commissioner for Palestine, ordered his personal physician to attend the former Conquering Lion of Judah.

The news came at 4 a. m. and, as his custom, prayed at the Ethiopian church. He strolled for a half hour in the grounds of the King David hotel with other members of his family, accompanied by a Palestinian detective.

Later he returned to his suite for breakfast and became ill. The high commissioner's physician arrived shortly afterwards and diagnosed the news' ailment as a nervous collapse.

A radio was installed in the news' suite last night to enable him to listen to Premier Benito Mussolini's proclamation at Rome annexing Ethiopia as an Italian colony. He was said to have been unable to restrain his emotions and turned off the radio in the middle of the historic speech.

Earlier today, the news received this correspondent and a few other foreign newspapermen and announced that he and his family fled from Ethiopia "in order to save our people from extermination by Italian poison gas."

The news then abruptly but apologetically left the room to receive a telephone call from Paris. A spokesman for the emperor told the United Press that the news had received an offer of $100,000 for the second two weeks and $50,000 for the first two weeks to attend the Texas centennial exhibition.

The emperor and his family, accompanied by a handful of faithful followers, arrived last Friday aboard the British cruiser Enterprise to enter self-imposed exile in the Holy Land. After the defeat of his imperial guards at Korem, the emperor was in constant flight.

Dr. Eckener, Captain Ernst Lehmann, the commander of the Hindenburg, and other members of their party cancelled part of their afternoon program in order to get about three hours rest at the hotel before the reception and dinner, given under auspices of the board of trade for German-American commerce.

They were luncheon guests of the German consul-general, Hans Borchers. A reception at the Explorers' Club was called off and they were hustled through an engagement at the International Philatelic exhibition ahead of schedule.

Dr. Eckener delivered 1,040 stamped envelopes brought from Germany by the Hindenburg to the exhibition. Each bore a commemorative as well as regular air mail stamp. They were carried at the rate of 40 cents per half ounce.

Dr. Eckener reserved one envelope for delivery to President Roosevelt for his collection. Some of the Hindenburg officers, including Dr. Eckener and Captain Lehmann, went to Washington by train tonight to meet the President and other government officials.

4 OFFICERS INJURED IN TWO AUTO CRASHES. Bullet Halts Car After One Smashup; Charges Are Booked.

Atlanta police radio cars had a bad day of it yesterday when two of them figured in severe crashes, with four radio patrolmen badly shaken and bruised, a woman motorist receiving minor lacerations and a negro prisoner, riding in one of the cars, cut about the head.

Answering a call at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning, a radio car containing Patrolmen W. E. Whitten and R. E. Finley was struck broadside, by a car driven by a youth listed as Max Braselton, 18, of a Plum street address. Braselton's car was traveling at approximately 50 miles an hour, the officers stated.

The police car was knocked on the sidewalk and into a light post, badly maiming it. Braselton tried to escape in his car, the officers stated in their report, and stopped only after Finley sent a bullet through the glass of the car. Braselton was charged with driving while intoxicated and reckless driving.

The second police car crash occurred yesterday afternoon at Glen Iris drive and Highland avenue, where the car, manned by Officers W. H. Rauschenberg and Charles P. Whaley was overturned when struck by a car driven by Mrs. Annie Laura Reese, of Smyrna, Ga., according to police reports.

J. W. Robinson, 16, negro, who had been arrested by the officers for disorderly conduct and fighting, was cut about the head in the crash, and the officers escaped with minor bruises. Mrs. Reese, who received a laceration on the leg, was charged with reckless driving.

POLICE BULLETS HIT MAN IN FLEEING AUTO. Call to Fight Results in Long Chase; Driver Is Sought.

A call to a fight in front of 359 East Fair street early yesterday morning resulted in a 20-mile chase in which an officer fired several shots at a fleeing automobile after his own car had been nearly wrecked twice. The car was finally lost.

Jack Humphries, 26, of 478 Woodward avenue, who, officers said, admitted having been in the fleeing car, was later taken to Grady hospital for treatment. Police said he had named the driver. He is being sought for questioning. Humphries told police the man he named had refused to heed pleas to stop the car, saying he did not want to get caught "with this stuff in the car." Humphries said he did not know what the man was referring to.

Approaching the group of men on Fair street said to have been engaged in an argument, Radio Patrolman E. S. McEwen, riding with Patrolman E. T. Payne, jumped out of the car and chased one of the men on foot. Two others got in a waiting car, where a fourth member of the group was sitting, and the car fled at a high rate of speed. Patrolman Payne gave chase and pursued the car for more than 20 miles over city streets, at times reaching a speed of more than 60 miles an hour, he reported. Twice he drove up beside the car and ordered the driver to stop and twice the driver swerved his car and almost wrecked the police machine, once running it up on the sidewalk in front of 27 Trinity avenue.

Payne reported he shot at the tires of the fleeing car on two occasions. After the lengthy chase, the car was finally lost at McDonough boulevard and Milton avenue.

Later in the night, Humphries was brought to Grady hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the left side. Patrolman W. L. Owens reported that Humphries told him he was shot by a policeman during the auto chase. Humphries was brought to the hospital by a man listed as Clarence Miller, of 333 Woodward avenue. Miller told police someone knocked at his door and asked him to take the injured man for treatment. He said he found Humphries in another car, which had several bullet holes in it, and helped transfer him to his car. Humphries said the other driver refused to take him to the hospital. Humphries condition last night was said to be "fair."

"Sure... come on in!"

RIGHT now, doors all over America are being opened—opened so that peace of mind and security may enter. For millions of Americans have discovered what a grand thing life insurance is, and how it can make their dreams and hopes for the future come true. And they have discovered something else, too. They have found that their life insurance representative is more than a salesman—that he is a man with a friendly, sympathetic understanding of their personal problems, their money worries, their responsibilities. They have come to know that, if he sometimes seems enthusiastic, his enthusiasm is justified—for he has seen the quiet miracle of life insurance at work. He has seen it providing for wives and children who have been left alone. For others, he has seen it transforming worry and discouragement into comfort and security. He has seen it making a man's dreams come true when every other way has failed. Within the next few days this man will call on you. Welcome him with a smile and say, "Sure—come on in!" He will give you a booklet, "Seven Wise Men." Read it carefully. Then, let him tell you how you, too—on your present income—can start a plan that means security for your family if you die, and security for your wife and yourself, if you live.

Nearly 50 Pct. of Electric Utilities Controlled by 9 Holding Systems

Federal Power Commission Reports Output Increased 32 Times in 1902-1932 Period; Employment 8 Times; Annual Income Now $2,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—The Federal Power Commission reported today that nearly 50 per cent of the vast electric utility industry was controlled by nine of its largest holding company systems.

The information was contained in the second of the commission's reports on its national power survey which was ordered by congress.

Commissioner Basil Manly said the report would "give students of the industry and representatives of federal and state regulatory boards a clearer picture of this vast and complex industrial organization than has been available before."

The nine-system control of 49.7 per cent of the industry was detailed as follows:

Electric Bond and Share group, including American Gas & Electric, American Power & Light, Electric Power & Light, and National Power & Light Company, 11.5 per cent; Consolidated Gas Company of New York, 6.8; Commonwealth & Southern Corp., 6.3; North American Company, 6.1; Niagara Hudson Power Corp., 4.5; Standard Power & Light Corp., 4.5; Pacific Gas & Electric Co., 3.6; United Gas Improvement Co., 3.6, and Associated Gas & Electric System, 2.8.

In addition, a chart showed the United Corporation, organized by J. P. Morgan & Co., holding 28.1 per cent of voting control in United Gas Improvement, 5.1 in Commonwealth and Southern, 21.9 in Niagara Hudson and 1.5 directly in Consolidated Gas of New York, in which Niagara Hudson held similar voting power.

United Corporation held voting rights in other companies, and Lee & Co., nominee of the Chase National Bank of New York, was shown as holder of 10.7 control of International Paper & Power Co., and 42 per cent of United Power & Light, another 28.1 per cent of which was held by Koppers Gas & Coke Co., a so-called Mellon company.

The commission fixed the book value of the industry at $13,000,000,000, and the annual gross income at about $2,000,000,000.

Probably 100,000,000 people, more than 75 per cent of the nation's population, the commission said "now live in homes that are lighted by electricity."

The tremendous growth of the industry was indicated by other figures: Value of plant and equipment increased 25 times in the 1902-1932 period; income from electric service, 23 times; generating capacity, 29 times; output, 32 times, and employment 8 times.

"At the beginning of 1935," the report said, "the electric utility industry consisted of approximately 1,629 privately owned operating companies and 1,930 municipal systems."

This might be taken to indicate that the control of the electric utility industry in the United States is highly decentralized. Such is not the case.

"All of the municipal utilities and many of the privately owned electric companies are financially and corporately unrelated as independent units. The combined generating facilities and annual production of these isolated municipal and private units are less than 10 per cent—about two-thirds municipally and one-third privately owned—of the totals for the industry."

"It is only within this portion of the electric utility industry that the centralization of control exists.

"The development and operations of the remaining 90 per cent of the industry are controlled directly or through subsidiaries by 57 principal systems, several of which are gigantic enterprises comparable in the value of their assets with some of the largest manufacturing and railroad companies.

"The electric utility service in this country, therefore, is predominantly in the hands of a few large systems."

2 KILLED IN COLLISION OF TRUCK AND AUTO

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., May 10.—(AP)—Mrs. May Pate, employee of the state laboratory of hygiene, and her nephew, Laurie McLellan, were killed instantly today in a wreck on the Dunn-Fayetteville highway.

McLellan's car collided head-on with a truck driven by Marshall Galt, Lake City, S. C., who suffered a broken collarbone.

The truck, loaded with 1,000 crates of tomatoes, turned over on McLellan and his mangled body was not extricated for an hour.

McLellan, employee of a Chapel Hill drug store, had picked up his aunt and came here for the weekend.

An inquest will be held tomorrow at the scene, the Rhodes Mill bridge, near Godwin.

RICHMOND, Va., May 10.—(AP)—Delegates to the 58th annual conference of the American Library Association will begin a series of nearly 100 separate meetings tomorrow morning when junior members gather for an informal breakfast discussion.

The approximately 3,000 delegates, who have overflowed hotels into private homes in Richmond and neighboring cities, will assemble for the first general session tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock to hear an address by Dr. Louis Round Wilson, president of the association and dean of the graduate library school of the University of Chicago.

John Stewart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary and chairman of the Richmond public library board, will welcome them to the city.

The conference machinery will be put in final shape at meetings of the association council during the morning and of the membership committee at luncheon.

Questions of paramount interest to professional librarians, including that of adequate support and service programs to meet modern requirements, will be considered by the delegates in general and sectional meetings.

The American Library Institute, the Bibliographical Society of America, the League of Library Commissions and the National Association of State Libraries, affiliated organizations, will conduct separate meetings during the six-day program.

The association will announce the recipient of the John Newbery medal for the most distinguished children's book written during the year at a banquet Tuesday evening, one of the highlights of the conference program.

Day-Old Quadruplets Are Thriving On Whisky and Sugar Water Diet

$20-a-Week Father Moans "Not So Good," Mother, Asked for Names, Delightfully Remarks "We Had Names for Twins, But for Four."

PASSAIC, N. J., May 10.—(UP)—The Kaspar quadruplets thrived on a whisky and sugared-water diet tonight while the laborer father moaned, "Not so good," and wondered audibly how to provide for the astonishing addition to his family.

The mother, overcome with dejection yesterday at the multiple birth, cheered up and named the three boys and the girl who arrived just one day too soon to be a Mother's Day gift.

"Names, yes," she said, apparently thinking aloud when a hospital attendant asked about labels for the babies. "We had names for twins, but for four—"

Then Mrs. Kaspar, 36, said slowly: "Frances for the girl, and then Frank." A slight hesitation, then she went on: "Felix and Ferdinand for the other boys," and the "rs" had it all the way.

"We were expecting twins, yes," said the father, Emil, a 47-year-old machinist's helper at the Erie railroad yards. "But now with four more, I guess I'll have to bring a box car home to hold 'em."

Got Job Two Weeks Ago.

The Kaspars live in a three-room basement apartment. For a year and a half he was unemployed until he got his present job two weeks ago.

The first of the babies—the girl—was born at 12:35 p. m. She weighed three and a half pounds. The first boy arrived at 2:15 p. m. He weighed three pounds and four ounces. Then minutes later another boy, weighing two pounds 13 1/2 ounces, was born and the hospital corridors began to buzz with excited gossip.

But that was as nothing when at 3 p. m. the expected twins had become quadruplets with the arrival of another boy, the heaviest of the lot, weighing three pounds nine ounces. They weighed a total of 13 pounds two and a half ounces—three pounds, one-fourth ounce more than the combined weight at birth of the Dionne quintuplets.

After the second baby was born, Dr. Frank J. Jani—himself only 32 and a far cry from the country doctor type exemplified by Dr. Alva Daffoe—sent out a hurry call for more incubators, of which St. Mary's hospital ordinarily has but two.

Fed With Eye-Dropper. Dr. Jani prescribed a diet of sweetened water and two drops of whisky, administered with an eye-dropper every two hours. He was well pleased with their condition today.

The doctor said Mrs. Kaspar, buxom, motherly type weighing 160 pounds, is rapidly regaining her strength and should be able to leave the hospital in about 10 days. The babies must remain in incubators for an indefinite period.

The births of the first three were normal, although their arrival was premature by about five weeks. The birth of the fourth was "slightly difficult," the doctor said.

The couple, married in 1930, has two other children, Ellen, almost four, and their nearly two.

The quadruplets were established in a special nursery under the personal supervision of Sister Frances, superintendent of obstetrics. A number of graduate nurses have volunteered their services and are being used in shifts of four. Thus each baby is constantly cared for.

"The babies were a little premature but they appear to be fully normal in every respect," Dr. Jani said. "They are doing splendidly."

The three boys were named by their mother in the order in which they were born. The babies' names were worked in colored bands into tiny brackets and fastened around their wrists.

"Mrs. Kaspar is now thinking constructively of what she must do to take care of the babies," Dr. Jani said. Her husband seemed most worried about the baby carriage problem, and beds.

$20 a Week Pay.

"I guess we'll have to use wash baskets," he decided, and then began worrying about food, clothes and the other things babies need. His job pays 57 cents an hour and he has averaged about $20 a week.

Kaspar's relatives didn't join him in singing the blues, but cracked jokes at his expense.

"Think of Emil walking the floor with four babies at a time," said Cousin Frederick Gierth, and roared with laughter. Frederick's wife, who is caring for Ellen and Ralph Kaspar while their mother is in the hospital, silenced her husband and assured reporters that the new babies would be taken care of, somehow.

The Kaspars were childhood sweethearts in Germany. After coming to this country, Kaspar lived in Saddle River. Nine years ago he sent for his sweetheart, Emilie, and they married in a suburb of Passaic where she lived with friends. They were married three years later.

The hospital was besieged by reporters, photographers and newsreel cameramen. Because the infants must be kept in incubators, the newsreel men have been out of luck so far as they have wanted permission to take pictures of the babies. They had to be content with "shooting" Emil.

DENTISTS OF GEORGIA OPEN MEETING TODAY

Williams, chairman, and Dr. Sam Cole, vice chairman, of Atlanta, the public health education division of the association, through its members examined and tabulated the conditions of 128,900 school children during the 1935 school session. More than 50,000 other school children were examined, but reports have not been filed.

The session today will include addresses by Dr. Thad Morrison, Atlanta, president of the Georgia Dental Association; Dr. F. L. Ball, of Cincinnati; Dr. Victor H. Sears, of New York city; Mary S. MacDougall, Ph. D., of Atlanta, and others.

For Digestion's sake—smoke CAMELS

Busy Americans Find Smoking Camels a Pleasant Aid That Helps Digestion to Proceed Smoothly—Increases Alkalinity!

Many annoyances of our daily lives—rush, worry, mental strain—slow down the flow of the digestive fluids so necessary to good digestion.

Science and common experience agree that smoking a Camel is a pleasant way to stimulate good digestion. For Camels increase the flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—necessary for the enjoyment of food and for good digestion. Smoke as many as you like... they never get on your nerves.

From Camel's costlier tobaccos you get unequalled mildness. Smoke Camels for a comforting lift—for well-being—and for digestion's sake! Camels set you right!

LIGHTNING SPEED of petite Mrs. Ethel Arnold (above) depends greatly on digestion. "I smoke Camels with and after meals," says Mrs. Arnold. "And I enjoy my food more and digest it better too."

O. D. GLADWELL describes operating a pneumatic drill. "This battering ram is tough on the digestion," he says. "I just smoke Camels, and Camels set me right."

AT THE MAYFAIR ROOM of the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit, the fine tobaccos of Camels, their delightful flavor and lift, are a natural complement to perfect dining. Paul Fischer (right) has observed that Camels are the favorite and are steadily increasing in popularity. "A glance around our tables," he says, "proves that those who appreciate quality have made Camels their first choice."

664 PARACHUTE JUMPS—record of Joe Crane (above), who has tumbled through 350 miles of empty air. "Camels set me right!" he says. "It's natural for me to turn to Camels for digestion's sake."

METHOD AND PROCEDURE USED. Evidence obtained by scientists under controlled laboratory conditions definitely establishes the fact that smoking a Camel increases the rate of flow of the digestive fluids. The importance of this in facilitating the process of digestion is a matter of common knowledge.

Costlier Tobaccos!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS... Turkish and Domestic... than any other popular brand.

MILITIA PROTECTS ALABAMA NEGRO

Suspect in White Girl's Death Today Goes on Trial at Huntsville.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., May 10.—(AP) Walter Miller, negro, charged with the murder of a white girl, goes on trial here tomorrow behind the guns of 225 national guardsmen ordered to prevent a repetition of two previous demonstrations quelled by tear gas.

Four companies of militia were ordered to escort Miller by train from Birmingham where he has been held following his arrest in the killing of Vivian Woodward, 19.

The prisoner, brought here several days ago in a military motor caravan, was the object then of a threatening, howling crowd. The troops hustled

Miller into a truck and sped out of town.

Miller was arrested in Terre Haute, Ind., several days after the crime and returned to Birmingham where authorities announced he had signed a confession. The other negroes, held in the same jail, were released.

Miller pleaded innocent at the arraignment. Miss Woodward was attacked the night of March 28 while returning home alone from a theater.

HOOVER PREDICTS 30 ISSUES IN RACE

Former President To Deliver Address at Philadelphia on Thursday.

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover said today he saw "thirty issues" to be fought over in the presidential campaign this fall.

He declined to name them, or to point out the leading one.

With customary reticence, he cut short interviewers who met him on his arrival from California aboard the North Western's Overland Limited.

There are 30 issues and you know how their relative importance can change between now and November," Mr. Hoover said.

The former chief executive said he planned to spend his time here visiting personal friends, discussing the campaign with political advisers, and working on the address he is scheduled to deliver at Philadelphia on Thursday.

He said he would depart for the east tomorrow on the New York Central's Twentieth Century Limited.

'YOUR FIGURE, MADAME'

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

EXERCISE ALONE INADEQUATE FOR REDUCING.

Exercise is no match for calories. You cannot hope to lose weight at golf, walking or the daily dozen, as long as you continue to eat in excess of your energy needs. The energy (calories) supplied in even small servings of food is much greater than can be used up in moderate exercises.

Let's compare the number of calories used in your favorite activities with the calories supplied in common foods.

Walking at the rate of two and one-half miles an hour, a person weighing 130 pounds will burn in one hour approximately 105 calories, which amount could be offset by eating a handful of peanuts, half a doughnut, or two extra pats of butter. Even a brisk walk of three and three-fourths miles an hour burns only 250 calories, which is probably fewer calories than contained in the average sandwich.

You may feel that 18 holes of golf entitles you to a hearty luncheon, but not if you expect to lose weight! Giving you the benefit of the most devious game, you probably would not burn more than the 700 to 800 calories supplied in the average golfer's luncheon. It seems appalling that this could be true, but figures always tell the truth!

The individuals who can reduce by exercise alone belong to the group that are only slightly overweight, and are in the minority. A mere 10 pounds of excess can be removed by exercise. In fact, from the standpoint of both health and figure, that is the best way to do it. But with 20 or more pounds of overweight, the average person lacks time, persistence and endurance to reduce without dieting. In general, exercise cannot satisfactorily cope with any overweight above 10 per cent, and should be supplementary to diet. By combining diet with exercise in the best regulated program a 20-pound loss can be established over a period of three months. This fixes a loss rate of approximately one and three-fourths pounds per week. This steady loss may be stabilized from week to week, and is likely to be permanent. This is not an argument against exercise—far from it—for every reducing program should include regular and consistent exercise. Its value is not in the utilization of calories, but, rather, in the toning effects on the musculature. What exercise lacks in dealing with calories, it more than makes up in its beautifying qualities. Exercise evokes symmetry, acts as a skin astringent to prevent sagging, following removal of fatty tissue, and strengthens and tones the muscles to condition them against a redeposit of fat.

From every standpoint—health, figure, and permanence of weight loss—it is best to reduce by diet and exercise rather than by either method alone.

PAY HIKE FOR SAILORS URGED BY ROPER GROUP

'Sea Career Has Little To Offer Type of Man Required for Safety.'

NEW YORK, May 10.—(UP)—Better working conditions and increased pay for sailors together with a general revision of maritime laws were recommended tonight in a report of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper's safety at sea committee.

A career on the sea has little to offer the type of man required to operate ships safely and effectively, the committee said. The group, headed by Walter Parker, of New Orleans, and Howard S. Cullman, has held several hearings, the last one being for striking seamen who received an opportunity to voice their grievances against ship owners.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, democrat, New York, chairman of the senate commerce committee, was criticized for the delay in undertaking the labor survey called for by resolutions passed after the Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters.

"In the past," the report said, "there has been a tendency on the part of certain ship owners to oppose safety of life at sea. Such a policy is without justification. There has been a tendency to repress discussion of safety measures with the traveling public through fear it would act as a deterrent to travel. We believe this policy to be erroneous and antiquated."

In discussing labor conditions, the committee said: "Such welfare activities as are common to other industries should be uniformly undertaken by the shipping industry. Pensions, vacations with pay, workmen's compensation, sickness and death benefits and all other measures calculated to build morale should be established."

"Uniformly decent and satisfactory conditions of work should be established in this industry, as well as fair rates of pay and methods of payment of wages. There is no longer any occasion for regarding seamen as an abnormal social group just because they are sailors."

The suggested revision of maritime law included the following:

"It has been submitted to our committee that maritime law, in so far as it relates to safety at sea, in many of its phases is antiquated and in need of drastic revision."

"Thus, admiralty decisions, like all common law, have tended to follow the thought of the best legal minds in the field, which has resulted in the owners' attitude predominating."

The committee recommended an increase in the budget of the Bureau of Navigation. A change in the law was recommended so that steamboat inspectors might be criminally prosecuted for making false or misleading reports.

Dissatisfaction was expressed by the committee with last year's inspection record.

"The Department of Commerce estimated that 8,800 inspections were not completed in 1935. That is a performance rating of only 22 per cent which is too low for safety work."

When Disaster Calls for Action the answer comes IN MATERIALS, MONEY and MEN!

A peaceful north Georgia city wakes to an April morning. Its people go their usual ways, unworried, unhurried, only mildly disappointed to be greeted by drab skies and a strange calm instead of the bright sunshine and scented breeze expected of Springtime in these greening hills.... Unannounced, unprepared for, a deathly blast of hellish wind roars down, strikes---and is gone. Gainesville is a twist of broken wreckage. Death and destruction have paid an awful visit.

The hubbub of Christmas was subsiding and quiet plans were being made for the New Year in Atlanta. A drizzly rain began to fall, while the temperature wavered between just above and just below the freezing point. When early winter darkness fell on the evening of Saturday, December 28, the sheath of ice on poles, trees and streets was growing thicker.... Before midnight, the whole Atlanta area was groaning beneath the killing pressure of relentless tons of ice. Limbs of giant oaks snapped like match-stems. Streets were strewn with debris. Atlanta and her neighbors were paralyzed.

WILD winds whip down on the Cordele region—a tornado strikes near Augusta—flood waters invade the streets and homes of Rome—the most punishing winter in years flails the state with its fury. Calamity strikes swiftly—and swiftly its damages must be repaired if human suffering and property loss are to be held within even half-way bearable bounds.

Before the frightening noise of the Gainesville tornado had well died down, Georgia Power Company trucks were rumbling into the city with extra men and supplies—to plunge into our part of the huge job of rebuilding the town of which we are an old citizen. By sundown of that terrible day, lines had been stretched through and over blocks of ruins to the parts of town undamaged; by three minutes after midnight, hundreds of men had restored the power supply out of the wreckage of poles and wires—and electricity was there for all who could use it; for the rapid strokes of emergency or the long pull of reconstruction. From that minute on, power has been ready to serve each home and each business as rapidly as shattered structures were rebuilt and officially pronounced fit to receive it, safely.

Order Out of Chaos

Between 6:09 P.M. and midnight, December 28, the Atlanta ice storm broke ten high voltage transmission lines supplying the city—put eleven other main circuits out of commission—crashed, twisted and otherwise rendered useless literally thousands of smaller, more segregated lines. Service to two-thirds of our customers was dead—the whole city and suburbs were endangered. Under tremendous difficulties, in alternating freeze and downpour, extra hundreds of men were mobilized and thrown into the breach, working day and night. Reserve generating stations hummed into action, the whole available resources of men and materials were organized to make unremitting counter-attack on the storm—until the city and its environs were normal again.

Despite all precautions known to science and ingenuity, these calamities, and others, strike swiftly. It takes a close-knit and alert organization, a spirit that puts service above all personal interest, and abundant resources of men, materials and money that will not ask one moment's delay, to act swiftly and surely in such an emergency.

When these disasters fell, men of the Company worked unceasingly; in ice, in ice water, in fire, in flood. Street car men dragged wreckage from the tracks, scraped away ice, watched sleepless through the night at their stilled cars, hoping against hope to resume their runs. Technically trained men left their desks for posts in the field; others took up the burden of their work, in addition to their regular duties. Ordinary shifts were forgotten—ten, eighteen, twenty-four hour hitches of duty were performed; gladly, uncomplaining. Telephone operators handled calls at the rate of 1,200 an hour. One girl trudged six dark, slippery miles to be at her post when needed. Tired, hollow-eyed linemen grabbed sandwiches, gulped hot drinks, returned to their jobs. Sales officials sliced bread, office men poured coffee, bookkeepers drove trucks. More men were needed. They were recruited by radio and through the newspapers—from any distance, at any necessary expense. Men were fed at their work, men were quartered, men were fitted with proper clothing for their tasks. An army was in action—an army of loyal, capable, competent workers; real men, real women.

Every move attended by danger—workmen repair broken lines in a tangled web of icy limbs and wires during the Atlanta ice storm.

Service Is Our Job

It is the tradition of the Georgia Power Company that service to the public must not fail. If it should fail, it must be restored, and quickly—no matter what the cost may be, no matter what self-sacrifice may be required. That is the tradition also of the men and women who make up the Company. The past winter has proved it. We are proud of them, as you are proud of them.

When the crises came, the Company was ready also with resources of money, materials, experience. Our storm and calamity losses of the past winter exceed a million dollars, but the service goes on, even better than it was before. Warehouses filled with materials, ready and waiting for just such needs, prevented delays, saved hours and weeks in the task of rebuilding, made possible the rolling of carloads and truckloads of supplies into Gainesville within a few hours after the tornado struck. Resources of experience also counted heavily in making the work effective, efficient, cohesive in the midst of chaos. It is the Company's duty to be ready without notice to transform itself from efficient routine into efficient emergency action—and it was ready.

This advertisement is published in tribute to the men and women who made this record possible. For the Company itself, we seek no credit. It is simply part of our job—an important job the people of Georgia have entrusted to us, one we hope always to perform to their complete satisfaction.

Tired workers in an emergency kitchen renew their strength.

Charming Viennese Is Feted Guest of Mr. and Mrs. Booker

By Sally Forth.

ATLANTA counts among her most interesting visitors this week Mrs. Robert Leonard, of New York, formerly of Vienna, Austria. Mrs. Leonard is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Booker, who will entertain at an informal picnic in her honor this evening at the Capital City Country Club. The charming Viennese was the cynosure of all eyes yesterday at the horse show as she sat with her hosts in a box near the rail. Attired in a smart black and white sports costume she watched with unabated enthusiasm the thoroughbreds and their riders as they circled the ring.

Mrs. Leonard is the wife of the well-known artist and frequently poses for her husband's drawings and sketches. Although the visitor's features have been declared flawless from an artist's viewpoint, it is the beauty of her hands that has attracted comment from European and American artists. She is the tall, slender type of figure and a clear-cut cameo. Mrs. Leonard's husband is a vivacious, cheerful character and in the foreign accent that creeps into her pronunciation of the English language.

Before establishing residence in New York ten years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leonard lived in their native Vienna, where the latter was a well-known cinema star, playing with the leading German film company. In the Metropolis, where Mrs. Booker and Mrs. Leonard became friends several years ago, the latter and her husband are members of that city's artistic colony as well as out at East Hampton, Long Island, where they maintain an attractive summer home.

FRIENDS of Helen June Roberts are rejoicing over the honor bestowed upon this youthful Atlanta last week when she was elected president of the Sigma Iota Chi sorority at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. This is Helen June's first year at this well-known institution, where she is a member of the junior class and where next year she becomes a "distinguished senior."

Helen June's popularity at North Fulton High, from where she graduated last June and was a Sigma Delta, has continued at Stephens. She has shown the same dramatic ability she displayed at North Fulton when given an important role in the senior class play. Helen June has taken a keen interest in dramatics since enrolling at Stephens. Her acting and her graceful dancing have added considerable talent to the school's organizations sponsoring plays and pageants. Helen June will return early next month to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Roberts, and she will be a popular belle attending the social gayeties planned for the boys and girls home from school.

A GRACEFUL dance, Clair de Lune, given by Ernestine Hirsch Stern, will feature the program given Tuesday evening at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium. Miss Stern will dance under blue lights, with a silver scarf, giving the effect of pure moonlight.

The program will bring together in one unique performance a number of the south's outstanding artists. One of them, Miss Claire Harper, has recently returned from Philadelphia, where she went to the finals in the annual competition sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

My Day By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Friday.—This standard and daylight saving time certainly complicates my life. I wish we could all be on the same time, because I never was good at arithmetic.

I went to Philadelphia this morning to meet the democratic women and found that though I did not have to arrive there until 12 o'clock, I had to leave Washington by an 8 o'clock train to accomplish this as Washington is on standard time and Philadelphia is on daylight saving time.

I rather wish I had an opportunity to see my small grandson, who lives near Philadelphia, but I fear one of my grandchildren and large groups of ladies do not amalgamate very well, so I shall have to await a visit from him in the near future.

From the station we went directly to the home of Mrs. Earle, the wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, for a delightful luncheon. As we arrived we were greeted by a group of Girl Scouts whom I am always glad to see. After luncheon there was a reception and I made a 3 o'clock standard time train to New York, where I hope to have a more or less peaceful week-end.

I have in my brief case a great deal of material which has to be read through during these next few days—some in preparation for a speech, one report from the prison industries board, a report of one of the public housing groups, two government reports, and a manuscript on education from a gentleman who kindly sent it to me some time ago. I am ashamed to have had it so many weeks without giving it my consideration.

Trains are valuable to me primarily because they provide me with reading time. I only wish that some of this reading time could be given to the books which I have piled up waiting the day when I shall have the leisure hours to sit and lose myself in somebody else's thoughts. I do assimilate a great deal of many other people's thoughts, but they are all more or less along the same lines.

Miss Ethel Saul and Mr. Hurwitz Wed at Jewish Progressive Club

Miss Ethel Saul became the bride of Harry Hurwitz on Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Jewish Progressive Club with Rabbi Harry Epstein, assisted by Cantor Landman, officiating in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and friends. The club was decorated with palms, cydonia, fern and amaryllis. The bride was dressed in white with heavy white satin and outlining the edge were vicker waxes with white and red ribbons. The bride's beauty was accentuated by her gown of ivory satin, fashioned along princess lines and a graceful flowing effect at the skirt, which elongated to form a train. The sleeves of the model were open to the elbow and tight fitting to the wrist. Her illusion tulle veil was clasped to her head by a halo of rose point lace, and a coronet of seed pearls extended across the front. The only ornament worn by the bride was a pearl necklace. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and white lilies tied with white satin ribbon.

Following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Saul complimented the bride and groom at a dinner-dance and reception. The bride's table was decorated with white and pink flowers, a miniature fountain at each end. The bride and groom left by motor for Chicago, Ill., to reside in Atlanta. The bride traveled in an ensemble of beige crepe trimmed in amber fox. She wore a brown accessories and a shoulder spray of bronze orchids.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN No. 115

Bobolo and his warriors returned to the river, their minds full of plans to raid some downstream village to acquire the food which the pygmies demanded for keeping Kali Bwana hidden for so long. Eagerly they seized paddles and pushed out into the stream. . . .

At that moment, Old Timer was busily propelling his large canoe through the turgid river. Tarzan had cautioned him to flee the country of the Leopard Men, but he was ignoring that warning. Instead, he was seeking some trace of Kali Bwana and her captors.

Old Timer's venture might easily prove suicidal, but his love for the beautiful girl outweighed all reason. The vision of her melancholy face shone before him like some brilliant light, blinding him to all hazards, illuminating a precious goal he might never reach.

But the light of his love sharpened his eyes for every clue to the missing Kali Bwana. Thus he caught sight of Bobo and his villainous crew paddling out into the river. A minute later the black men saw him and shouted excitedly: "Get him! Get him!"

DAILY SHORT STORY

WRITTEN OFF

Professor Alan Took the First Opportunity to Dispose of His Debt to Paul.

By GEORGE L. MORRISON.

When Paul Carroll appeared over the rim of the dark arroyo and slid down its rocky side dragging his pick after him to where Professor Alan had lain for two days with a broken leg, he seemed to the professor to be a direct answer from heaven. The geologist, though half delirious from hunger, pain and exposure, appreciated the gesture.

Younger man just then was to go ahead with his quest for the gold which would right his tumbled little world.

"Before you go, Paul," the geologist directed, "tell me where there is the most likelihood of finding gold. If you find any, bring it back here and I'll assay it and test it." And so he was arranged.

Paul began to see, as he listened to the professor's detailed descriptions of the rock formations and strata he must look for, just why he had had such little success previously. He had been groping blindly. But now he was equipped with knowledge.

As the days passed, Professor Alan noted with some amusement the increasing cheerfulness of Carroll. He had with a great deal of stubbornness refused Alan's offer of money for his deed of mercy. Now he was bringing in each night a quantity of rock, small enough to be sure, but unmistakably shot through and through with yellow, gleaming metal.

He would earn the money by the sweat of his brow, and refused to sacrifice his pride!

By the time that the supply train arrived, the older man was well enough to hobble around by himself. He called to Carroll. "How much will it cost you to get back home?" he asked him. The other calculated. "If I had $150 I could manage it," he answered. "If I can just find enough ore-bearing rock to give me that!"

"Bring me that sack from the tent," he directed. Picking up the rock and the small flask of metal out upon a sheet of canvas he looked at it closely while Carroll and the supply driver watched.

"You've earned more than that this trip," was Alan's opinion. "I'll tell you what I'll do. Would you take $400 for the lot of it, as it stands?" Carroll's jaw dropped and the driver grinned. "Do you mean there's that much there already?" Carroll was incredulous, and a wildly happy look spread over his countenance.

"I'll give you my check, which you can cash when you go back with the supply outfit. I'll save you time!" Carroll gripped his hand. "Alan," he said, "if you only knew what this means to me!" The professor only smiled as Carroll went to gather his few belongings for the happy trip home.

The supply man scratched his head dubiously and looked at the pile on the canvas. "I think you're crazy, Alan," was his opinion. "That stuff is all iron pyrites, fool's gold. The whole of it isn't worth the sack you had it in!" The professor looked at the purchase he had just made, then stole a glance at Carroll, humming as he made his belongings into a bundle.

"Maybe so," he chuckled. "But this is one time that somebody buys a gold brick with his eyes open . . . and likes it!"

Tomorrow, "Close-up," by Virginia Conover, tells how a woman learned the unpleasant truth about the man she planned to marry.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion and Greatest Card Analyst.

RAISING AN OPENING NO

When your partner has opened the bidding with one no trump you should raise him to game immediately when you hold two and a half honor tricks, or two honor tricks with a five-card suit headed by the queen or better; or a six-card suit headed by one honor trick and a half honor trick outside (one and a half honor tricks in all).

For example, if your partner opens with a bid of one no trump you should bid three no trump if you hold hands such as:

♠ K Q J ♠ K 6

♥ 6 5 3 2 ♥ 8 7

♦ Q 7 ♦ K Q 7 5 4 3

♣ K Q 7 4 2 ♣ 6 3

Ridiculous Conservatism.

The take-out double and its proper responses form one of the most important parts of the modern game. The double is a bid which either the doubler or the responding hand are deplorably common. Today's hand is typical.

Neither side vulnerable.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write to Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My husband is one of these men who has a great big smile for his friends and for the people he works with but he seldom has a smile for me. He is one of the most indifferent husbands alive. When we have had a big fuss and he has slapped me several times he tells me, "I love you, I love you," but never otherwise. A wife can't appreciate love talk under these circumstances. I have made over him until I am sick and tired of it and have decided to be just as indifferent to him as he is to me. I sometimes tell him that I will leave but he knows I love him and wouldn't go for anything, so he says "Go right ahead, any time you get ready." Please tell me how to be happy.

again and how to overcome his indifference. MRS. A. D. O.

Answer: Try a little indifference with dignity. Don't permit yourself to be drawn into an argument that can end in only one way—your being forced to eat humble pie. Lay off the threats, for they give the lie to your indifference. Treat your husband with such politeness that he will not be tempted to behave as a cad to you. If he happens to be the indifferent sort as you suppose there is nothing you can do to change his nature. But there is plenty you can do to avoid scenes.

It is easy to understand why a wife loses her self-control when fear is gnawing at her heart. It is natural for her to wage a fight for evidence of her husband's affection and, failing to get it, natural that she should be resentful. Yet in spite of natural reactions she must use her head or worsen her case. Fits of temper, fits of tears, threats only pour oil on the flame.

A lot of slack-jaw has passed both ways before a man slaps his wife. Even a cad of a man won't dare lay hands on a woman unless she has lured him with her tongue and laid herself liable to such abusive treatment. He won't humiliate a woman by slapping her as if she were a child then picking her up and petting her as if she were a half-wit unless she has invited his disrespect.

Wives don't always get their just desserts from husbands but they get what they invite of courtesy or discourtesy. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I have a awful habit of biting my fingernails. Mother tells me it is only a matter of will-power and a 19-year-old girl should be able to exercise it. My hands are so terrible looking that when I go to a party I have to hide them. Have you any suggestion that might help me? DISCOURAGED.

Answer: Maybe the experience of a 10-year-old child will help you. Her mother hounded her about biting her nails for three years before she was able to get her hands clean. Finally she began to notice the hands of other children who were "nail-biters," and she was filled with disgust. She asked each member of her family to call her every time she raised a finger to her mouth. In a few short months the habit was broken. Proudly she announced to the family, "I have done without my nails so long. I don't even want them any more." Surely, you, a 19-year-old girl, won't let a lot of 10-year-olds win in will-power. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.
